Admiral William Standley SRA #118

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Admiral William Standley State Recreation Area - The purpose of Admiral William Standley State Recreation Area is to make possible the public enjoyment of recreational experiences in a natural redwood-Douglas fir forest association on the banks of the South Fork Eel River near and upstream from the town of Branscomb in Mendocino County. Overnight or day use activities for recreational enjoyment by the public may be provided to the extent that there is not impairment of the natural values inherent to the site. The prime recreational values relate to the forest situation and to the South Fork Eel River.

09/1975 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

The purpose of Admiral William Standley State Recreation Area is to make available to the people forever, for their use and enjoyment, a beautiful grove of Coast Redwoods and associated plant and animal life, enhanced by the South Fork of the Eel River in the vicinity of Mud Creek in northern Mendocino County.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Admiral William Standley State Recreation Area is to manage all of the varied resources of the Park, and perpetuate them for the enjoyment of future generations.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

The preservation of a fine grove of coast redwoods with 3,200 feet of river front and to make available for day use when conditions warrant it.

Ahjumawi Lava Springs SP #190

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Ahjumawi Lava Springs State Park, in Shasta County, is to preserve and protect a remote and pristine area containing one of the largest systems of freshwater springs in the western United States, springs which percolate through porous lava to sustain the unit's Big Lake and Horr Pond. The unit contains extensive recent volcanic flows, with jagged surfaces, deep faults, lava tubes and cinder cones. The shoreline areas and pond islets support oak, pine and juniper forests, and the slopes support rabbit brush and sagebrush. Cultural features include prehistoric Native American rock fish traps and bedrock mortars, as well as village and ceremonial sites. The unit provides magnificent vistas of Mount Shasta, Mount Lassen, as well as other regional peaks.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's cultural, natural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

Ano Nuevo SP #222

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Ano Nuevo State Park, in Monterey County, is to preserve and protect a substantial area on the western slope of the central Coast Range inland from Ano Nuevo Point. The property contains a diversity of plant communities, including old growth forest freshwater marsh, red alder riparian forest and knobcone pine forest. Its four perennial streams support steelhead trout and coho salmon, and its wetlands are habitat to the rare San Francisco garter snake and red-legged frog. Cultural resources include the remnants of a prehistoric Native American village site and a number of structures from the nineteenth century Cascade Ranch. In conjunction with adjacent and nearby public lands, the unit permits the protection of important regional ecological corridors.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's archaeological, cultural, natural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

The Antelope California Poppy Reserve is established to protect and perpetuate outstanding displays of native wildflowers, particularly the California Poppy, the State Flower, and to make these spectacular floral displays available for the enjoyment, inspiration, and education of the people for all time to come. The prime resources of the unit include both the vegetation, much of which is seasonal and disappears during the hot and dry season of the year, and the soil and the terrain on which these plants grow. The Department shall take necessary steps to manage these vegetative associations for their perpetuation and enhancement, and to make them available for as long a period of each year as is reasonably possible, within substantially natural parameters.

Interpretive programs and displays shall be undertaken to assist the public in understanding these plants and their ecological relationships, both during the blooming season and at other times of the year. Facilities for visitors shall be designed, located, and constructed so the facilities, and the visitors who use them, will have a minimum impact not only on the vegetation and the flower displays which they provide, but also on the enjoyment of these features by other visitors.

Evidences of remains of prehistoric habitations, wherever they occur within the unit, will also be protected against all kinds of damage caused by construction or visitor uses; and they shall also be interpreted to the public, for better understanding of the meaning and significance of the uses in historic times may also be perpetuated and interpreted.

Benbow Lake SRA #123

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Benbow Lake State Recreation Area, in Humboldt County, is to preserve and protect the streamside environment associated with a section of the South Fork of the Eel River, together with its adjacent forested areas. The unit contains a small seasonal dam and reservoir, which constitute the only water impoundment on this designated wild and scenic river. The reservoir and its shore areas provide significant local recreational opportunities.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural, aesthetic and recreational features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits. The department will work cooperatively with other entities to further these objectives.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Benbow Lake State Recreation Area is established to make available to the public the recreational opportunities which are afforded by the relationship of land, forest and stream which exists along the South Fork of the Eel River upstream from Benbow Dam, extending past the mouth of the East Branch South Fork Eel River and embracing the peninsular lands which lie in the Big Bend of the South Fork Eel River in this vicinity. The recreational opportunities center upon the values inherent to the streamside situation with reference to the South Fork Eel River, and to the forested values which occur along the stream banks and in the peninsular area. All day use and overnight recreational activities may be accommodated within the unit to the extent that they do not inflict permanent damage upon the resources of the Recreation Area.

01/1974 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Benbow Lake State Recreation Area is to make available to the people forever, for their use and enjoyment, an area conducive to multiple purpose recreational opportunities. These non-urban outdoor recreational activities are consistent with, and enhanced by, man-made Benbow Lake on the South Fork of the Eel River near the mouth of its east branch in Southern Humboldt County. Its campgrounds, meadows and forested slopes of Coast redwoods and Douglas fir, together with all the natural and historical values of the area, contribute to the quality of that recreational experience.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Benbow Lake State Recreation Area is to maintain and operate public outdoor recreational facilities for the public's use and to furnish those functions and services which will provide appropriate recreational experience to the greatest number of people without impairing the natural, physical, historical and archeological attributes of the area.

Burleigh H. Murray Ranch #285

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of the Burleigh H. Murray property, in San Mateo County, is to preserve and protect a substantial area of rolling hills on the western slope of the Santa Cruz Mountains, an area with native grasslands, coastal scrub, riparian woodlands and mixed evergreen forest leading to coastal redwood stands at the higher elevations. The remaining portions of an historic dairy ranch complex, with a very rare example of an 1899 English bank barn, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and an interesting stone bridge, together provide a vignette of early California dairy ranching. Mills Creek provides steelhead spawning gravels. The location of the property is such as to provide protection for valuable wildlife corridors and linkages for a regional trails system.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the property's cultural, natural and aesthetic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

The purpose of Calaveras Big Trees State Park is to make forever available to the people, for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment: The North and South Calaveras Groves of Sierra Redwoods and their enclosing basins, in a condition of ecological integrity, the outstanding mixed coniferous forest occupying much of the park, held in an essentially natural condition; the native wildlife and naturally functioning ecosystems; the scenic mountain and forest landscapes typical of the central Sierra Nevada; all streams within the park, and their esthetic and appropriate recreational values; and the historic and cultural features related to the first discovery of the Sierra Redwoods, and to the history and prehistory of the park.

The Department shall devise, prescribe, and implement appropriate programs of resource management to perpetuate the park's values and to fulfill its declared purposes. It shall also develop and establish full and effective interpretive programs covering the park's varied resources. The Department shall provide facilities that make available the park's values in a manner that is fully consistent with their perpetuation. Facilities shall be of types and designs appropriate to the State Park classification and to the regional environment of the central Sierra Nevada; their capacity and extent shall be determined by the needs of visitors enjoying the park's features, and by compatibility with its natural and cultural resources. Park management shall regulate the visitor uses as necessary, to keep them compatible with perpetuation of park resources.

Castaic Lake SRA #569

10/1985 - General Plan

The purpose of Castaic Lake SRA is to provide opportunities for outdoor recreation experience for the people, by assuring optimum use and enjoyment of the natural, cultural, recreational, and scenic resources of the lake, its shoreline, and surrounding lands within the SRA as identified in the General Plan Amendment.

The function of the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation through the 50 year operating agreement with the State at Castaic Lake SRA is to design, develop, operate, and maintain recreation facilities, and to provide services which enable the people to enjoy high quality recreational experiences. Facility development and the unit's operation shall provide for the protection, enhancement, and interpretation of the natural and cultural resources of the area.

06/1966 - Master Plan Review Committee

The purpose of Castaic Reservoir State Recreation Area (Project) is to make possible the full utilization of the aquatic and other recreational opportunities in and about Castaic Reservoir in northwestern Los Angeles County in meeting California's public recreational needs, giving full consideration to all scientific, scenic, and historical resources of the areas.

The function of the Division of Beaches and Parks at Castaic Reservoir State Recreation Area (Project) is to provide for the design, construction, and operation of those public recreational facilities which are necessary, commensurate with the recreational need and use "to the end that maximum development of the recreational potential of state water projects shall be realized"; to provide that initial facilities for recreational use are in place and ready for operation as soon as the Castaic Reservoir is completed; to provide for the protection, enhancement, and interpretation of the wildlife, natural, and historic resources of the area; and to provide that all recreational design, construction, and operations are conducted in such a way as to be consistent with the orderly operation of the reservoir for its other authorized purposes.

Castle Rock SP #404

03/2000 - General Development Plan or General Plan

The purpose of Castle Rock State Park is to preserve the outstanding natural resources, wildland values, and supporting ecosystems of the upper watershed of the San Lorenzo River, while providing opportunities for the visiting public to enjoy and be inspired by the unique and diverse topography, geology, biotic communities and scenic views.

To accomplish this purpose, the California State Park System is to manage the park resources for the continuing scenic, educational, scientific, and recreational benefits of present and future generations. Park management shall guide the recovery of natural processes and features in the park towards the balances that existed prior to the arrival of Euro-Americans. Restoration, preservation, and education of wildland resources and ecological processes will be primary considerations within the Natural Preserve.

03/2000 - Spirit of Place Statement

Castle Rock State Parklands are a diverse mix of natural features that include most of the remnant ecosystem types of the Santa Cruz Mountains. Although substantially altered since the arrival of Euro-Americans, the recovering park lands provide a glimpse of the original primeval character of the Santa Cruz Mountains. One can gaze from the ridgetops along Highway 9 and Skyline Boulevard or hike over a landscape of steep, densely vegetated canyons, dense redwood and mixed evergreen forests, oak woodlands, and open grasslands. Many of the ridges are embellished with sandstone rock outcrops that include very rare tafoni formations. On clear days the outstanding scenic views extend south to Monterey Bay and beyond. To the west nearly the entire length of forested Ben Lomond Mountain is discernible. A portion of Big Basin Redwoods State Park is visible in the near distance. To the north grassland covered ridges and steep, forested canyons extend to the horizon. The ecological linkage between Castle Rock State Park and other natural areas of the Santa Cruz Mountains is apparent. Little evidence of human occupation is visible from the park.

Along park trails one can view cascading streams and luxuriant vegetation. In the spring wildflowers are abundant in the grasslands and oak savannahs of the park. Near Partridge Farm are numerous large, old live and black oak trees. A short distance away are large rock outcrops where experienced climbers can enjoy a view of the San Lorenzo Valley and Monterey Bay. Not as readily seen, the fortunate visitor may encounter some of the larger mammals of the park, such as deer and bobcat. On warm days it is not uncommon to see turkey vultures circling overhead on thermals in search of food.

On clear, moonless nights at Castle Rock celestial bodies adorn the sky owing to the lack of light pollution sources so common in the metropolitan areas of the Santa Clara Valley to the east. For

Unit Vision:

Castle Rock State Park becomes a place of spectacular scenic beauty - a natural area mostly unencumbered by human habitation or sensory intrusions. The park remains an integral component of the Santa Cruz Mountains ecosystem and its evolutionary processes, provides public access to this unique environment, and offers a place for visitors to enjoy and appreciate its inherent resource values. Castle Rock State Park becomes a place of spectacular scenic beauty - a natural area mostly unencumbered by human habitation or sensory intrusions. The park remains an integral component of the Santa Cruz Mountains ecosystem and its evolutionary processes, provides public access into its unique environment, and offers a place for visitors to enjoy and appreciate its inherent resource values.

05/1980 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

The purpose of Castle Rock State park is to perpetuate for the people forever, for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, a natural area of the Santa Cruz Mountains on the upper watershed of the San Lorenzo River which incorporates a particular combination of geology, topography, and plant assemblages, including the unique caves and related erosional anomalies in Vaquero sandstone; a diversity of plant life ranging from specimen-size oaks, Madrone, California Bay, Douglas Fir, and Coastal Redwood to luxuriant chaparral and grasslands; and numerous inspiring view sites.

To accomplish this purpose, the California State Park System is to manage the park resources in such a way as to retain them in a near wilderness state for the continuing scenic, educational, scientific, and recreation benefit of the people and to interpret these resources in an effective manner. In all cases, facilities, where necessary for public health, safety, and convenience, will be of the more simple and primitive type, provided in designated locations with the least disturbance to the scenic beauty and resources of the overall area.

Chino Hills SP #508

02/1999 - General Development Plan or General Plan

The purpose of Chino Hills State Park is to preserve the natural, cultural, and scenic resources of the rolling hills, wooded canyons, and riparian forests that are representative of the early California landscape, and make them available for public enjoyment and education.

California State Parks will endeavor to preserve and restore native habitats in the park for their intrinsic natural values, to promote biological diversity, and to support the integrity of regional ecosystems. California State Parks will endeavor to protect the cultural and scenic resources, promote an understanding of the park's unique features, and provide recreation opportunities in a manner consistent with the protection of natural and cultural values.

02/1999 - Spirit of Place Statement

Chino Hills State Park gives those who visit it a sense of being transported back in time to an earlier and more underdeveloped California. Upon entering the park, the transition from the human-made environment to the natural environment is abrupt; housing tracts quickly give way to open hills. Once inside, the sight and sound of modern intrusions are minimal and one feels many miles away from cities and freeways. The park interior is enveloped by its ridgelines, and one perceives the land as being secluded, protected and still. Without city noises and visual obtrusions, visitors become aware of the park's subtle movements, natural smells, and variations in microclimate, vegetation, and topography. Many endearing values of the park are intrangible. The qualities of open space, natural sounds, and fresh air cannot be quantified like physical resources can, but they allow visitors to be aware of and reconnected with the natural world.

The forces of nature that have shaped the land are evident by the steeply cut valleys, landslides, and rolling hills of the parks. These places mark the passage of time through their variation of seasonal colors. The park's landscape changes over the course of a year from one that is dry and dusty to one that is moist and lush. These variations can also be discovered while moving through the various park environments. South facing slopes can appear dry and exposed, while a short distance away, a riparian woodland can provide water and dense shade.

The park is one of few in the Los Angeles Basin that offers opportunities for tranquility, solitude, and relief from the hectic urban life that surrounds it. It gives visitors a place to explore and recreate at their leisure. As the pace of life in this area quickens and the size of the population adjacent to the park grows, these values will become increasingly precious to many park visitors.

One comes away from Chino Hills State Park feeling refreshed. But the effect of one's experience at the park is most apparent when one returns to the urban environment. The park leaves visitors with a feeling of compassion for the disappearing values of California's past landscapes and a

The purpose of Cuyamaca Rancho State Park is to perpetuate for the enjoyment, inspiration, and enlightenment of the people: the natural scenic landscape and wilderness values of the Cuyamaca and western Laguna Mountains, the naturally functioning ecosystems therein, and the history and significant cultural features of early human occupation, settlement, and activity.

The department shall prescribe and execute a program of resource management, based on current and continuing scientific research, which is designed to perpetuate the park's declared values. The department shall provide recreational facilities that make available these values in a manner that is consistent with their perpetuation. Research, management planning, and execution shall take into account the full enjoyment of the park by visitors for whom the park is intended.

04/1966 - Master Plan Review Committee

The purpose of Cuyamaca Rancho State Park is to make available to the people in perpetuity, for their enjoyment, inspiration, and enlightenment, major portions of the Cuyamaca and western Laguna Mountains at the headwaters of the Sweetwater River and Boulder Creek in San Diego County, embracing in an essentially natural condition fine examples of southern coniferous forests, oak groves, chaparral, and spacious meadows; together with all scenic, historic, scientific, and recreational resources of the area.

The Division of Beaches and Parks shall prescribe and execute a management program for Cuyamaca Rancho State park designed to perpetuate its values in accordance with the declared purpose of the park; shall interpret these values to the public; and shall provide such facilities and services, consistent with the declared purpose, as are necessary for the full enjoyment of the park by visitors.

Del Norte Coast Redwoods SP #103

11/1999 - NPS/DPR General Management Plan/General Plan

Redwood National and State Parks were established to preserve significant examples of the primeval coastal redwood forests and the prairies, streams, seashore, and woodlands with which they are associated for purposes of public inspiration, enjoyment, and scientific study, and to preserve all related scenic, historical and recreational values.

02/1985 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

Del Norte Redwoods State Park is established to extend park system protection to the rugged coastline of Del Norte County between Ender's Beach and Wilson Creek, together with the region extending inland to the valley of the West Branch of Mill Creek. The primary feature of this parkland is its forest of coast redwood and associated species, which is not only magnificent but most unusual in that it clothes the slopes and bluffs directly facing the ocean. The old route of the Redwood Highway, now a trail, is in this forest tract; and there are several known Native American sites. The natural and cultural features of this area are to be managed for public enjoyment.

The present route of U.S. Highway 101, with its heavy commercial and tourist traffic and with ascending grades in both directions, is a danger and an annoyance to its users, and it transmits the roar of its heavy traffic to all but the most remote parts of the park. It shall be a major objective of the Department to achieve the rerouting of this highway to an identified route via Wilson Creek and the upper slopes of the West Branch of Mill Creek, avoiding all memorial groves.

The purpose of Ellen Browning Scripps Natural Preserve is to protect and perpetuate the area's prime resource values. These values are: 1) the Torrey pine and its supportive native plant community, 2) state and federally listed rare, endangered, and threatened plants and animals, 3) evidence of Native American occupation, 4) plants and animals designated by the department as species of special interest, and 5) exposed geologic sequences.

The long-range objectives of the department shall be to manage the prime resource values in such a manner that the ecological processes function as closely as feasible to what they would have without modern mankind's influence. This management may involve purposeful resource manipulation to negate or minimize past or future impact by people.

Appropriate visitor use of the unit includes only those activities which allow for and encourage enjoyment of the prime resource values and do not detract from or degrade from these features, so that future generations shall have the same experiences and opportunities.

Note: The general plan (page 31) indicates that this declaration of purpose is an improvement over an early declaration prepared by the staff "in the mid-1960s" but not taken to the Commission. The text of this earlier declaration is provided and is as follows:

Within Torrey Pines State Reserve there is established the Torrey Pines Natural Preserve, embracing the natural forest of Torrey pines which exist south of Los Penasquitos Marsh on the uplands between the marsh and the ocean. The purpose of the natural preserve is to provide the fullest measure of protection and perpetuation by management that can be achieved in relation to this only significant Torrey pine forest in the world. Interpretation will emphasize the primary themes for the unit, and will be carried out in accordance with the policies outlined in the Interpretive Prospectus which is summarized in the General Development Plan. Necessary services and compatible facilities will be provided for the safety, convenience, and enjoyment of visitors.

The primary themes for this unit are the industrial history of gold mining in California and the contemporaneous social and cultural aspects of life, especially as they relate to the Grass Valley area and the Empire Mine. Secondary themes are the mining industry's contribution to the economic development of California, and the natural history of the area, particularly as it relates to mining.

The flow of history will extend from 1850, when gold was discovered on Ophir Hill by George E. Roberts, until 1956, when the mine finally shut down, a span of 106 years. The entire flow of history must be considered in order to tell the complete story of hard-rock gold mining at Empire Mine. However, a prime period will be emphasized.

The prime period will be from 1877, the approximate date of William Bourn, Jr.'s interest in the mine, until 1942, when gold mining was halted for the duration as non-essential to the war effort. - A Zone of Primary Cultural Interest has been identified that is associated with resources of prime significance. The Zone of Primary Cultural Interest is an area in which complete historical integrity and authenticity are sought. At Empire Mine State Historic park, the zone encompasses the portion of the south parcel that lies between East Empire Street and the section line that runs east to west across Osborn Hill, as well as the immediate area of the Rowe headframe and ore bins. (See Proposed Land Use Map.) It contains the Empire Mine industrial complex and the Empire Cottage residential complex.

Estero Bay #749

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of the Estero Bay property, in San Luis Obispo County, is to preserve and protect a rich, diverse and particularly scenic area of Pacific Ocean coast, with sea stacks and intertidal areas, a substantial area of wetlands, low bluffs and coastal terraces punctuated by a number of perennial and intermittent streams, and containing a pocket cove and beach at Villa Creek. The property's rich diversity of habitat types includes marine, intertidal, estuarine, riverine, coastal salt marsh, freshwater marsh, coastal foredune, coastal and riparian scrub and grassland, collectively providing habitat for a number of endangered species, including the snowy plover. The property includes Native American occupancy sites.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits. The department will work cooperatively with other entities to further these objectives.

The purpose of Folsom State Recreation Area and the Auburn unit is to make available to the people the great recreational opportunities afforded by, and in relation to, the reservoirs impounded behind Folsom, Nimbus, and Auburn dams on the American River, including aquatic features, environmental amenities, and the historic values of the localities, and to interpret these resources to the people.

The prime resources at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area and at the Auburn unit are the reservoirs behind Folsom and Nimbus dams, and the future reservoir to be impounded at Auburn Dam. These reservoirs are surrounded by an interesting vegetation mosaic, and include scenic, geologic, and historic values. - Cultural resources within the project are significant, and shall be preserved: 1. Because the department has a moral and ethical responsibility to respect the religious beliefs and traditions of the Native American community, and therefore, to preserve intact Native American cultural sites. 2. To prevent the loss of historical information about the heritage and cultural development of California 3. To prevent the loss of anthropological and archeological data.

10/1975 - Resource Management Plan

The primary purpose of Folsom Lake State Recreation Area is to make available to the people the outstanding recreational opportunities afforded by the existence of this large body of water in an area of excellent environment, favorable climate, and easy access. Of secondary importance is the preservation, marking, and interpretation of significant historic and prehistoric sites, relating to the American Aboriginal Period, the Gold Rush Period, and to the later development of the Folsom-Sacramento region. Significant ecological values are known to exist, and they should be carefully identified and protected by the establishment of one or more Natural Preserves and/or other appropriate reservations. Archeological sites of significance should also be given adequate protection or professional excavation.

Fort Ord Dunes SP #476

01/1997 - General Plan

(General Plan rescinded by Commission 06/97)

The purpose of Fort Ord Dunes State Park is to perpetuate forever, for public use, inspiration, esthetic enjoyment, and education, an area along the central California Coast of unique natural beauty and scientific significance including sandy beaches and coastal dunes. All scenic, natural, cultural and recreational resources shall be managed as a whole, preserving and restoring the natural character of the park in accordance with ecological principles.

The function of the California Department of Parks and Recreation at Fort Ord Dunes State Park is to restore and manage the unit's environmental complexes and scenic values; to interpret them effectively; and to provide, consistent with perpetuation of park resources, such day use and overnight facilities and services as are necessary for the public's enjoyment of the unit.

01/1997 - Spirit and Sense of Place

(from the General Plan which was rescinded by the Commission on 06/1997)

Fort Ord Dunes State Park is an area of contrasts. It is seen by millions of people as they drive by on State highway One, but it has been closed to the public for decades. The land is open and relatively undeveloped, yet the past development of the land for small arms training has significantly altered the landscape. The Army deserves credit for preserving the open space character of the land, yet they used the land for the most utilitarian purposes including sewage treatment and storm water disposal. The beaches and bluffs are pounded by the full force of the Pacific Ocean, yet they are composed of tiny grains of unconsolidated sand. The vegetation is dominated by African ice plant, yet the area is highly valued for its habitat value for endangered species. The area is revered for its beauty, but the site includes over 100 abandoned buildings.

Much of the beauty of the park is in its potential. There is a commonly shared vision that the park can become an area of outstanding environmental quality, available for all to enjoy. Just imagine the opportunity this park represents. Four miles of undeveloped coastline in view of the Monterey Peninsula, one of the most popular tourist destinations in the world, adjacent to the nation's (sic) largest National Marine Sanctuary, and the largest component of California's newest State Seashore. Exotic plants, abandoned buildings, and contaminated soil are not problems we should dread to face but challenges we are anxious to tackle and overcome. The establishment of Fort Ord State Park (sic) represents the public's commitment to the environment, to our quality of life, and to our faith in ourselves and the future.

The goal of the Department of Parks and Recreation is to facilitate the transformation of the

Fort Ross SHP #207

11/1975 - General Development Plan

The purpose of Fort Ross State Historic Park is to enable modern Californians to know, enjoy, and understand the Russian adventure in California. The visitor's experience should center on his better comprehension of the role of Russia in California's exploration and settlement. The interpretive objectives at Fort Ross State Historic Park are to be a presentation of Fort Ross' rise in Russian fur trade imperialism and its affect on the local situation in terms of the Indians and Spanish/Mexicans, and ultimately on modern American society.

The primary theme of Fort Ross State Historic Park centers on Russian political and economic affairs during this era with special concern for relationships with Spain and Mexico. As background to this major theme, consideration will be given to Russian international affairs generally, colonization, territorial expansion, economic and material growth, and the development of agriculture. Russian religious affairs and multi-ethnic relations will also be included. The secondary themes will include the Indian history and the effect of European contact on their development up to recent times and will include the American Era, stressing the economic, agricultural, shipping, and ranching activities. The period of time covered will be the time of Russian occupation (1812 - 1841), especially the last eleven years of the colony when it was at its height. Due consideration will be given to the American Era in the flow of history, particularly the American ranching activities. Although Fort Ross is an historical unit of the State park System, it has tremendous natural and scenic value as well. In addition to the common species of plants and animals associated with the north coastal prairie, coastal sage scrub, redwood forest, and mixed evergreen forest biotic communities, two rare and endangered plant species (Chorizanthe valida and Dichondra donnelliana) are found here, and the brown pelican, an endangered bird, may be seen flying along the coast during the winter. Many interesting geologic features can be observed in the park, including part of the San Andreas Fault zone. The fault has drastically changed the course of Fort Ross Creek and modified the growth configurations of trees along its course. These natural resources and the outstanding views of mountains, coast, and ocean will enhance the visitor's experience at the state historic unit; also, their preservation is essential to the primary historical purpose of the unit inasmuch as the historical values are to be presented in their original, natural setting to the fullest extent possible.

The primary cultural resources consist of the archeological remains of the Pomo Indians, the Russian people and Aleuts; and, the reconstructed buildings and walls. Secondary cultural resources are the American Era buildings and associated materials.

The Zone of Primary Cultural Interest is the area of Fort Ross itself and the village structures around the fort, as well as certain outlying locales. These outlying locations include the workshop area in the ravine to the east of the fort, the Russian cemetery, the rock pattern area in the grove of trees west of the fort, the warehouse area east of the ravine, and the remains of the Russian Road.

08/1975 - Resource Management Plan

The following is a listing of themes as presented in the California History Plan which pertain to Fort Ross. The primary theme of Fort Ross. The primary theme of Fort Ross State Historic Park relates to the History Plan and centers on Russian coastal, political, and religious affairs with special concern for relationships with Spain and Mexico. Russian international affairs generally, colonization, territorial expansion, economic and material growth, and the development of agriculture are important thematic expressions.

The unit's sub-themes relate to the American and Indian eras. Economic and material growth, agriculture, and water transportation are important themes for the American Era, while recent California Indians and changes due to European contact are important to the Indian Era.

Regarding the Flow of History, the general concern is the period from the ethnographic Pomo Indians through the Russian occupation to the American Era with the prime emphasis of the American Era being on the Call ranching activities.

Within this history flow, the prime period is in reference to the 1812 to 1841 Russian occupation with 1830 to 1841 being the prime emphasis. This is regarded as the most important time span for the unit, for the historic unit is statutorily named for the Russian occupation and 1830 to 1841 is believed to represent the period of maximum expression of the Russian occupation.

The prime cultural resources consists of the archeological remains of the Pomo Indians and Russian people in the area of the unit and the reconstructed buildings and walls. Secondary cultural resources are the Call Ranch buildings and associated materials.

Although Fort Ross is an Historical Unit of the State Park System it has tremendous natural and scenic resource values as well. In addition to the common and widespread species of plants and animals associated with the north Coastal Prairie, coastal Sage Scrub, Redwood Forest, and Mixed Evergreen Forest, biotic communities, two rare and endangered plant (Chorizan valida and Dichondra donnelliana) exist in the unit; while the brown pelican, and endangered bird, may be seen flying along the coast during winter. Many interesting geologic features can be observed in the unit including part of the San Andreas fault zone, which has drastically changed the course of Fort Ross Creek and modified the growth configurations of trees near the fault. Views of mountains, coast, and ocean are of outstanding scenic quality.

The Zone of Primary Cultural Interest includes the area of Fort Ross itself, the area of village structures around the Fort, the workshop area along the shore area in the gulch to the east of the Fort, the Russian cemetery, and related areas to this zone, like the rock pattern area in the grove of trees to the west of the Fort and warehouse area to the east of the gulch (cf. Fort Ross aerial photograph with cultural manifestations indicated in the Interpretive planning Unit's files, Design and Construction Division, Department of Parks and Recreation), all as shown on the attached map. No resources that are not either Russian or directly related to Russian resources relative to the prime period can be maintained in this zone.

The public purpose for Fort Ross State Historic Park is to enable modern Californians to know, enjoy, and understand the Russian adventure in California. The visitor's experience should center on his better comprehension of the role of Russia in California's exploration and settlement. The interpretive objectives at Fort Ross State Historic Park are to be a presentation of Fort Ross' role in Russian fur trade imperialism and its affect on the local situation in terms of the Indians and Spanish/Mexicans, and ultimately on modern American society.

It is not inappropriate, in relation to the flow of history, to indicate the character of the post-Russian period, especially in terms of how the period came about relative to the Russian occupation in Alta California.

The purpose of Fort Ross is to make available to the people forever, for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, the site of the first Russian settlement in California, in its natural coastal setting on the coast of Sonoma County, as representative of a significant era in the history of California and the United States; together with all the scenic, scientific, historic, and recreational values inherent to the area.

The function of the Division of Beaches and Parks at Fort Ross State Historic Park is to preserve, maintain, and interpret the resources and values of the historic park, and to provide facilities and services for the public, consistent with the declared purpose of the unit.

10/1989 - General Plan

The purpose of Fort Tejon State Historic Park is to make available to the people the site of the military post, Fort Tejon, by preserving, restoring, and replicating its historical facilities and environment, and interpreting its significance to the Euro-American colonization of California.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Fort Tejon State Historic Park is to foster preservation, restoration, reconstruction, and interpretation of the military facilities that existed at one time or another during the military occupation of the site, and to develop interpretive displays of the events and people associated with these structures. Furthermore, it is the function of the department to preserve and protect the natural values associated with this historic unit, and to provide for public enjoyment and understanding of those resources.

09/1982 - Resource Element

The purpose of Fort Tejon Historic Park, located in southwestern Kern County, is to provide for the people an opportunity to view the location and remains of one of the few surviving southern California military sites of the early American period, and the historical and cultural resources related to that era.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Fort Tejon State Historic Park is to foster the preservation, restoration, reconstruction, and interpretation of the military facilities that existed at one time or another during the military occupation of the site, and to develop interpretive displays of the events and personalities associated with these structures.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Fort Tejon Historic Parks to make available for people forever, for their inspiration and enjoyment, the story of Fort Tejon as a significant American military post in Early American California with respect to its law and order mission and its existence as the location of the "camel cavalry", a successful experiment in using camels instead of horses in desert areas, although an experiment which was not operationalized broadly within units of the U. S. Cavalry. The purpose of the Department of Parks and Recreation is to preserve, restore, and reconstruct as much of the Fort as possible through time, and to interpret and maintain the resources of the unit in a manner consistent with the purpose of the unit.

The purpose of Fremont Peak State Park, in San Benito County, is to commemorate the 1846 visit by American explorer John C. Fremont to this massive limestone promontory, the highest point in the Gabilan mountain range. This unit features typical oak woodland and grassland habitat and, in season, fine wildflower displays. The unit offers the visitor a sense of isolation, a mountain-top experience with unparalleled views of three counties and the Monterey Bay, and an exceptionally clear night sky suitable for astronomical observations.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Fremont Peak State Park is established to preserve for public appreciation and enjoyment an area embracing the summit of Fremont Peak and adjacent lands, the area being noted for its geological, natural, and historical features. Appropriate areas for public use, including overnight and day use activities, may be developed to enhance the public enjoyment of the park. Captain John C. Fremont is reputed to have raised the American Flag somewhere on Fremont peak in 1846 just before the beginning of the Mexican War, and this event will occupy a central position in the historical interpretation for the park.

Gaviota State Park is established to preserve for public use and enjoyment an important segment of the Santa Ynez Mountains, including the area surrounding Gaviota Pass, through which State Highway 101 passes between Santa Barbara and Santa Maria. The park extends from the Pacific Ocean on the south to the vicinity of Las Cruces on the north; to the western limits of Agua Caliente Creek watershed on the west, and to the vicinity of Gaviota store on the east. An important natural lagoon of great value and high quality at the mouth of Gaviota Creek is within the park. Important paleontological values are found in the ridge areas, particularly west of Gaviota Pass. A significant hot spring exists east of Gaviota Pass. Significant elements of the vegetation include oak woodland and related grasslands, chaparral, riparian habitat along the creek and its lagoon, and coastal prairie on the marine terraces. Historical values include an Adobe near Las Cruces and several significant archeological sites; the historical and archeological resources of the park will be identified, recognized and interpreted for public enjoyment in accordance with their values.

Recreational resources include the Pacific Ocean beach and opportunities for beach-related and upland day use and overnight activities.

Gaviota State Park has been established to protect and perpetuate, for public use and enjoyment, the natural and cultural and recreational values of this area embracing the culmination of scenic values in south-central Santa Barbara County and the adjacent ocean beaches. The dramatic scenery afforded by the natural land forms and the mosaic of vegetation upon them is to be perpetuated as nearly as possible in its natural condition, and restored to such condition where necessary. This natural scenic setting, forming as it does the background for both prehistoric and historic events that took place there, shall be safeguarded additionally in relation to those specific values in order that their restoration and interpretation may be the more complete.

Greenwood SB #165

11/1994 - General Plan

The purpose of Greenwood State Beach is to make available to the people for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, in an essentially natural condition, the outstanding scenic, natural, and historic values, including: the coastline embracing offshore environs; stretches of sandy beach and the dramatic sea cliffs; the riparian habitats associated with Greenwood Creek, Bonee Creek, and Li Foo's Gulch; the headlands and marine terraces; the geology and plant and animal life; the architectural, industrial and archeological remnants of the early redwood lumber industry; and the scientific values therein.

The department shall define and execute a program of management to perpetuate the unit's declared values, and provide recreational facilities and interpretation that make these values available in a manner consistent with their perpetuation.

11/1994 - Spirit of Place Statement

Past and present, the spirit of Greenwood State Beach is linked inextricably with the community of Greenwood - a relationship of mutual interdependence. Greenwood grew up as a doghold port, a company town centered around the lumber mill facilities on the coastal terrace and in Greenwood Cove below it. It owes its existence to the fortuitous circumstances of the juncture of the creek and ocean and the proximity to rich redwood resources.

Yet as much as this relationship is a symbiotic one, it is also one of contrast and change. This place was once a bustling, lively scene of people, activity, noise and movement. But when the last mill finally shut down, structures were demolished and the stockpile of timber logs and cut lumber disappeared. The buzz of the saw, the shouts of men, the clamor of mules and wagons, the whir of winches and cables have been replaced by the faint sighing of wind across the open plateau, the whizz of a fast-moving automobile on the highway. Water, wind, and time have restored the natural character of the beach and cliffs. Ecological processes have reasserted themselves on the terrace; today, remnants of foundations and land alterations are barely discernible through the brushy covering of vegetation that has taken hold. This is a place that speaks of change: the power of nature to regenerate itself, of life and how nothing stays the same.

Greenwood State Beach presents a series of dual natures and contrasts, beginning with that between the architectural quality and rural village character of the town and the character of the park - a rough natural space set in its midst. Within the park, from the historic post office anchoring the northern edge of the coastal terrace down into Greenwood Cove, the park progresses from a structured man-made environment to one increasingly unstructured and natural. The coastal terrace, an open, exposed and somewhat barren landscape, contrasts with the enclosed one of the cove. The old lumber road is the physical transition between them, providing the visitor with a unique journey between these two environments. The steep descent takes the visitor from the point of view of the observer, high above the sea and the beach, down into an intimate natural world where the sights and sounds and smells of the creek and surf and sea inundate the senses. From flat and open to curved and enclosed, from nearly barren to thickly vegetated. From the quiet spaciousness of empty sky to the encompassing sounds of earth and water. The park is both quiet and busy, windy and still, cool liquid and hot, dry earth, clear, bright sun and damp, misty fog, steep vertical slopes and flat horizontal planes, close and far away.

The one constant relationship between place and town has been the inconstant sea, exerting its magnetism on all who come within its province, drawing them to the shore, the meeting of land and water. At Greenwood State Beach, a backdrop of steep cliffs surrounds a small pocket beach like open arms, extending into the horizon and framing a view of the sea and sky dominated by the looming central presence of Gunderson Rock. From the east, Greenwood Creek passes through dark banks blanketed in a thicket of dense riparian growth. Reaching open ground, the water widens and slows into quiet ripples in its gentle progression across the sandy beach towards the sea. Here the ocean's wet tongue licks at the sandy fringe, nibbles at the land and offshore seastacks, on occasion taking great chunks from the cliffs. The sound of water - the crashing of waves on rock, the spew of foam, the soft susurrant of waves drawn back into the ocean across the sandy carpet - competes with the sounds of gulls and other birds. Man's ageless perception of its magnetism is expressed in the words of Rachel Carson: "Like the sea itself, the shore fascinates us who return to it, the place of our dim ancestral beginnings. In the recurrent rhythms of tides and surf and in the varied life of the tide line there is the obvious attraction of movement and change and beauty. There is also, I am convinced, a deeper fascination born of inner meaning and significance."

These distinctive areas present different challenges in planning for the future of this land as a unit of the State Park System. The magnetism of the sea attracts people for recreation, leisure, and solitude, and a great challenge will involve protection and preservation of the park's natural and historic resource values while on the same hand providing for statewide access, use and enjoyment of them. On the coastal terrace, an additional challenge is accomplishing that in a way that enhances this area's spirit of place as a contrasting complement to the town. The park cannot turn its back on the community - successful operation of Greenwood State Beach will depend on the park remaining an integral and vital component of the community, of finding a harmony between statewide use and local community character and desires. Hollister Hills SVRA #244

The prime resource of Hollister Hills State Vehicular Recreation Area is the recreational capacity of the hilly land with its varying steepness, types of soils, and types of groundcover. This area was specifically purchased for off-road vehicle use with funds designated for that purpose. The area has been successfully used for off-road vehicles prior to the time the state purchased the land, and there is a network of trails, roads, tracks, and hillclimbs throughout the property that facilitates this use. The purpose of this area is to provide a suitable and attractive place to operate off-road vehicles.

The objectives for protection will be to keep erosional debris within the boundaries of the area; to keep erosion to a minimum through proper drainage; to restrict use where accelerated erosion would occur; to continually rehabilitate, revegetate, restore, or stabilize areas where erosion has occurred; to promote and encourage developments that are desired by off-road vehicle riders that have the least damaging effect on the environment; and to keep the area scenically attractive.

The objectives of interpretation will be primarily oriented to OHVs, with public participation encouraged. Such subjects as off-road vehicle safety, driving techniques, and first aid have been suggested. An understanding of erosion problems and the differences of soils and their erodibility is also needed. The San Andreas Fault, which is a major feature of the area, will also be a primary interpretive subject, interesting to many of the visitors. Most natural, historical, and archeological features are considered to be secondary, and must be interpreted in proper perspective with the vehicle uses.

The management and public use of the prime resources will be done in such a manner as to satisfy the needs of off-road vehicle enthusiasts, consistent with the protection objectives that must be achieved if the area is to continue to meet its vehicular use objectives. Other resources, including both cultural and recreational, that are deemed interesting, unique, or important will be protected and preserved for visitors to enjoy. These resources will be featured as prime attractions only in relation to OHV uses.

The purpose of Dry Lagoon State Park is to protect, preserve, and make available to visitors the scenic, natural, historical, archeological, and recreational resources of the lagoons region of Humboldt County.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Dry Lagoon State park is to ecologically manage the unit's varied interdependent natural resources so as to ensure their perpetuation; to manage the significant archeological sites as nonrenewable resources; to interpret all the resources effectively; and to provide such facilities and services, consistent with perpetuation of park resources, as are necessary for the full enjoyment of the unit by the people.

01/1965 - Master Plan Review Committee

Dry Lagoon State Park is established to assure perpetual public enjoyment of the lagoon region of Humboldt County, in an essentially natural condition, extending from the sand spit of Big Lagoon northward to Stone Lagoon; including all related scenic, natural, historical, and recreational resources of the area.

The function of the Division of Beaches and Parks at Dry Lagoon State Park is so to manage the varied interdependent resources of the area as to insure (sic.) their perpetuation; to interpret them effectively; and to provide such facilities and services, consistent with the declared purpose of the park, as are necessary for the full enjoyment of the unit by the people.

Humboldt Redwoods SP #119

10/2001 - General Plan

The purpose of Humboldt Redwoods State Park is to protect, preserve, and perpetuate the outstanding natural and aesthetic values of the ancient redwood forests and their associated ecosystems found in the lower Eel River watershed. Through careful stewardship, the solitude and grandeur of the park's cathedral-like forests, its inherent wilderness values, and significant cultural features shall remain unimpaired for the enjoyment of succeeding generations.

These purposes will be accomplished through appropriate resource management programs that promote the Department's mission to protect and preserve significant natural and cultural resources. Interpretive programs for visitors shall instill an appreciation for the park's special features, the change in philosophy towards the redwoods over past decades, and an ethic for conservation. The park's features, programs, and services will provide for a high-quality visitor experience.

10/2001 - Spirit of Place Statement

Silence.

A misty veil.

Silky webs support the glistening dew.

Splintered shafts of light pierce the shadowed forest floor.

Two thousand-year-old living monuments of nature tower mightily over verdant carpets of redwood sorrel and ferns.

Deer graze warily at a meadow's edge, a mountain lion watches, a hawk feasts upon a squirrel's missed vigilance, a banana slug's glistening trail marks its silent passage.

Rain cascades downward, collecting, merging, gorging itself on grains of sand and ancient stones, its collective power swelling into a powerful, carving torrent.

Humboldt Redwoods State Park embraces a landscape of contrasts. Quiet, sunny meadows serve as entryways into the shadowed world beneath a 300-foot tall, light-absorbing canopy of green. Rivers that ensure life for migrating steelhead and salmon can be the demise of age-old giant redwoods, while carving deeply into mountains, scattering their ancient sediments miles downstream.

Roadways slip past ancient redwoods, quickly whisking passersby and their accompanying noise through the park. Beyond these sounds, the hush of centuries masks the bustle of the modern world, and the backcountry silence is broken only by the quiet, soothing sounds of nature. Listen carefully and hear a migrating steelhead breaking the water's surface; the squawk of a Steller's jay drawing attention to the ongoing life that has thrived here unmolested and little-changed.

Humboldt Redwoods SP #119

For thousands of years, humanity's footsteps trod lightly upon this ancient land, but for the past two centuries the passage of human footprints has multiplied ever more quickly, creating two distinct trails; the first of profound change and the latter of revered preservation. It is the former trail that we acknowledge and for which we must assume responsibility. It is the latter trail that gives us hope that humanity's footsteps can continue among these great redwoods, not as opportunistic visitors, but as proud stewards of our natural heritage.

The primeval redwood forests that nature slowly removed from throughout most of the world's temperate climatic zones over millions of years, human hands have nearly eliminated from the earth in two short centuries. Today, ancient coast redwoods inhabit only small, vestige pockets of their original eighteenth century world. Humboldt Redwoods State Park preserves and protects that which nature has determined is worthy of survival and that which escaped the axes and saws of earlier generations. For us, the second and latter trail, that of revered preservation, indeed offers its own rewards, but not of a monetary nature. Instead, we depart our short vistas to this park where we stood and wandered among these giants with an inspiration previously unknown and with a more complete understanding of our pivotal role in nature.

10/2001 - Vision Statement

The park is a mosaic of towering ancient and second growth redwood forests, prairies, and shrublands, largely untouched by humans. It stretches from canyon bottoms to ridge tops and is bisected by cool, clear streams, which support a host of aquatic life, with native fish returning to spawn in great numbers.

Natural processes and resource management promote healthy ecosystems, thereby providing habitats that support a wealth of both frequently occurring and rare species of flora and fauna. As the heart of the largest remaining ancient redwood forest, the park serves as a significant and critical link in a network of habitat linkages that allows for the free movement and interaction of plants and animals.

Interpretive programs and facilities provide visitors with a heightened awareness of the significance of the expansive forests that once occupied the redwood region and the priceless value of the remaining redwood ecosystem. Interpretation can promote a strong conservation ethic.

Significant cultural sites and features, representing the historic spectrum of human interaction with this redwood ecosystem, are preserved, protected, maintained, and interpreted. Interpretation evokes an appreciation of the park's indigenous inhabitants and establishes a connection with and reflection upon the pioneering spirit of later arrivals.

Developed facilities harmonize with the surrounding natural grandeur and complement the significant cultural areas that represent earlier periods. Visitors searching for more tranquility are accommodated by trails that lead to increasingly remote locations. These trails provide solitude in unspoiled natural areas where human problems and concerns may be forgotten.

Visitors are attracted in all seasons to the exceptional recreational experiences, aesthetic qualities, and the support facilities provided by the park and in nearby communities. They and their succeeding generations return, again and again, passing on forever this priceless legacy.

07/1964 - Master Plan Review Committee

Humboldt Redwoods State Park is established to make available forever to the people, in an essentially natural condition, for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, the Coast Redwood forests in the basin of the Eel River and its lower South Fork from Stafford Flat to Phillipsville, chiefly characterized by pure stands of Redwood on the alluvial flats; together with all collateral scenic, historic, scientific, and recreational values.

The function of the Division of Beaches and Parks at Humboldt Redwoods State Park is to establish a permanent boundary which provides adequately for the management, protection, and use of the primeval Redwood forests and related park values; to establish and defend a major zone of unimpaired ecological integrity from Rockefeller Forest to Children's Forest; so to manage all the varied and interdependent resources of the park as to perpetuate them for the unending benefit of the people in accordance with the declared purpose of the park, basing such management on sound principles substantiated by research; to interpret the park resources fully and effectively for public understanding and enjoyment; and to provide such facilities and services, consistent with the purpose of the park, as are necessary and appropriate for the full enjoyment of the park by visitors.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

11/1999 - NPS/DPR General Management Plan/General Plan

Redwood National and State Parks were established to preserve significant examples of the primeval coastal redwood forests and the prairies, streams, seashore, and woodlands with which they are associated for purposes of public inspiration, enjoyment and scientific study, and to preserve all related scenic, historical, and recreational values.

02/1985 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

Same as first two paragraphs of the Declaration in the General Plan .

01/1985 - General Plan

The purpose of Jedediah Smith Redwoods State Park is to protect, perpetuate and make available for the public enjoyment and inspiration the magnificent forest area of lower Mill Creek and the Smith River in its natural setting (this being the most northerly of the notable coast redwood forests). This park embraces a cross-section of the redwood belt, from the edge of the coastal plain to the inland margin, where the redwoods give way to interior species; no other park protects this feature so perfectly. Owing to a combination of climatic, pedologic, and other ecological factors, a number of species from inland regions and higher elevations mingle here with the coastal forms; protection of this unusual phenomenon is a major objective of the park. Native American sites and historic remains of regional significance are also recognized features for park protection.

As the largest remaining free-flowing river in California, and one of the purest, the Smith River constitutes a park feature of exceptional significance for the six miles that it flows in or along the park. The department shall use its full influence in appropriate ways to protect the purity of the river, and to bring about full protection of the upper watershed of Mill Creek, which flows through the park's primary redwood forest.

U. S. Highway 199 presently passes through the heart of the park, carrying not only tourists but heavy commercial traffic as well, with numerous undesirable impacts on the experience of park visitors. A bypass route for this highway has already been adopted; and it is a major objective of the Department to facilitate the removal of major highway traffic impacts from the center of the park. It is the intent of this plan to keep the existing Highway 199 open for public use.

Facilities in Jedediah Smith Redwoods State Park shall be of types and designs appropriate to the state park classification and to the regional environment. Their capacity and extent shall be determined by the needs of visitors enjoying the park's features, and by their compatibility with its natural and cultural resources.

08/1983 - General Plan

The primary purpose of Baldwin Hills State Recreation Area (SRA) is to preserve the last open space resource in this area of Los Angeles County capable of meeting the present and future outdoor recreation needs of the public. To preserve this open space, major portions will need to be restored and revegetated. The purpose of this restoration is to repair the damage that has occurred to the vegetation and land forms resulting from the past and present uses of the area.

The prime resources of the Baldwin Hills State Recreation Area are: the large open space quality which is in direct contrast to the heavily developed character of the surrounding community; the many scenic vista points from which most of the Los Angeles Basin, Pacific Ocean and local mountains can be viewed; and the potential of the unit to provide regional recreation opportunities for 2.5 million people within a radius of 16 kilometers (10 miles).

In addition, there are natural and cultural values in the unit that can provide other recreational and interpretive opportunities.

Kings Beach SRA #343

10/1980 - General Development Plan

The primary objective in acquiring the Kings Beach State Recreation Area was to provide public ownership of, and access to, the beautiful Lake Tahoe shoreline, so people could make use of the recreational opportunities afforded by the facility.

Use concepts of the facility should emphasize visitor use of the sandy beach for such activities as beachcombing, sunbathing, picnicking, swimming, fishing, sightseeing, nature study, and photography. The development of facilities should be restricted to areas already highly modified by past human activities, where natural values will not be affected. Areas for additional paved parking (currently dirt areas being used for parking), detailed landscaping and fencing plan, plus repairs to the existing pier and light standards are planned.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Kings Beach State Recreation Area is to make possible the public enjoyment of the passive recreational opportunities afforded by the shoreline of Lake Tahoe in the vicinity of Kings Beach. Only those public recreational activities which are compatible with the scenic beauty of the Lake Tahoe shoreline may be practiced within the Recreation Area. The resources of the recreation area may be manipulated or enhanced to improve the quality of the recreational experiences as long as the general aspect of the area is not changed as to scenic quality and ecological integrity.

La Purisima Mission SHP #513

09/1991 - General Plan

The purpose of La Purisima Mission State Historic Park is to preserve, restore, interpret, and make available to the people for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, the significant cultural resources associated with La Purisima Mission and its human inhabitants, as well as the unit's natural values. The natural setting of the mission is of particular importance because it allows visitors to step back in time and imagine themselves visiting La Purisima when it was occupied by the Spanish missionaries and the Native Americans.

The department shall define and execute a program of management to perpetuate the unit's declared values, and provide recreational facilities and interpretation that make these values available in a manner consistent with their perpetuation.

09/1991 - Spirit of Place Statement

Today's traveler along El Camino Real visits missions that are but a small part of the original mission complex; a surviving or restored church, a residence building, or maybe some melted adobe ruins - and these often in an urban setting. These remnants cannot relate the purposes and significance of the missions to the growth and change of California to the visitor. The great historic and social significance of the mission system is that these establishments were the earliest outposts of European civilization in California, thrust upon an indigenous people little expecting the momentous changes that would come to their lives.

In the late 1930s, government workers, scholars, and private citizens cooperated to bring about a restoration of La Purisima Mission. This was not to glorify the Spanish conquest of California, but to enable us to all understand the evolution of our history. These people recognized that at La Purisima they had a singular possibility "to reproduce such an establishment; to create an historic picture of great beauty and educational value, not to be excelled anywhere." further, they were "impressed with the opportunity there to provide for the public a rare educational feature - a complete mission establishment - such as it is not possible to prepare anywhere else in the United States, and (they) strongly recommend(ed) that we accept as our ultimate goal at La Purisima nothing less than the complete restoration of the whole establishment as it stood at the height of its glory and usefulness, furnished and equipped as it must have been at that time." Through this general plan, the Department supports this ultimate goal.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of La Purisima Mission State Historic Park is to make available forever to people, for their inspiration, educational elucidation, and enjoyment the site of and restorations and reconstruction of an excellent example of the Alta California Missions together with all of the cultural, natural, recreational, and scenic values inherent in the area. 07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

To reconstruct for public enjoyment for the public enjoyment and to preserve the flavor of one unit of the chain of California Missions on 966 acres of land.

(undated) - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

The purpose of La Purisima Mission State Historic Park is to perpetuate for public use, education and enjoyment as an historical monument and public park, the eleventh of twenty-one Franciscan Missions, with its gardens, surrounding acreage, environs and historic artifacts, dedicated to the vision and determination of Franciscan padres and the years of faithful service and labor by the Chumash Indians.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at La Purisima Mission State Historic Park is to prescribe and execute a program for the protection, maintenance, use, and interpretation of La Purisima Mission with its gardens, surrounding acreage, environs and historic artifacts, so as best to present the era and traditions of Franciscan padres and the Chumash Indians on a fitting historical representation of both; recognizing that this mission represents the best remaining example of an early 19th century mission setting.

The Department is dedicated to the preservation of La Purisima Mission in its present historical representation of the years between 1813 and 1823, and give due recognition to all related historical and natural values to be found in the area.

The function of the State Department of Department of Parks and Recreation at Leo Carrillo State Park is to restore, protect, and manage the resources and values of the State Park, and to prescribe and execute appropriate programs, facilities, and opportunities for public use and enjoyment in accordance with the declared purpose of the unit.

10/1996 - Spirit of Place Statement

At first appearance, Leo Carrillo State Beach is composed of the simple, basic elements of sky, water, and land - all colored in whatever the lighting, the hours, and the season work out. Lisiqshi, a village of the Chumash, once looked out at it all from its prehistoric site on a grassy knoll. The Chumash voices are silent now, long carried off by the winds coming off the water. Only the land remembers their sound. The land that was here before their time and ours knows all the spirits of this place, but it speaks a language we struggle to understand.

It is not because we do not try.

"We probe its soil mantle for secrets belonging to the passage of time.

We ask, 'How old are your geologic bones?' and are told, 'Very old, tens of millions of years, at least.'

We try to map its folds and crevices, and decipher its fault lines and the codes of minerals locked in stone.

"We kick up a fist-sized fossil, the likeness of an ancient sea creature sculpted in pale stone. It is identified as a rather common relic of long-ago life forms.

We attempt to map the intricate designs and patterns woven into its vegetative cover, a magical cloth that regenerates itself and gives life to others.

We end up with a fist full of lists, species, classification systems.

"We trace the waters that course through the hills, and follow their lines home to the sea.

We qualify and analyze into constituent parts, shrouding the mysterious intimacy of the water's movements through the land, sometimes passing us in secret darkness below.

We claim the floodplain shaped by its hand, and force its sinuous movements into the course of our convenience.

We hold it there with tons of stone, but now the layers of fertile sediments stop building up, and the young trees do not get born.

"The land in its wisdom realizes,
We know much and understand little."

The land rises from the waters of the Pacific, first into sea cliffs and terraces, and soon thereafter into the massive, rounded forms of the Santa Monica Mountains. Two well-travelled highways slice through the landscape, meeting very near where the waters of Arroyo Sequit join the Pacific Ocean. Pacific Coast Highway, or PCH as it is most often called, is now classic old beach route well settled into its coastal shelf. Mulholland Highway winds and drops along one side of Arroyo Sequit Canyon, its rather dramatic journey terminating at a simple stop sign. To the thousands who drive along these travel corridors each day, the undeveloped coastal and mountain scenery relieves, for a few moments, the urban intensity of life outside these boundaries. Approaching Sequit Point from downcoast, there is a certain drama in finally having that perfectly framed windshield view of nothing but sun-bleaches mountainside, ocean, and sky.

The character of this place is experienced in a special way by those who travel through in vehicles. Impressions are of a land-to-the-seascape, freeze-framed at a certain time of the year, at a certain time of the day. The interplay of light on the water, the atmospheric qualities on the horizon, and the seasonal hue of the hillsides have characteristic patterns of movement and change, but to someone driving through, they are abstract, silent, and relative motionless.

All of this changes down by the water. Here too, the scenery is composed of very basic elements: sky, sand, and water, with a simple backdrop of sea cliffs and mountains. But here the experience is multisensory, and the ocean dominates. It fills the air with its sound and scent and ceaseless movement. The scale and level of detail change near the water. The fine, sandy texture of the beach is broken by the rough course of dark cobbles scattered into the lower intertidal zone. In this rocky landscape, the whole intricate world of tidepool life reveals its tiny movements and patterns, protected, as it is, by the landmark promontory of Sequit Point. The coastal bluffs are rubbed smooth from constant exposure to the elements, and foot-worn paths come down the bluff faces to the sand below. Beach-goers find their way to all the access points, take up places along the shore, and transform the sand with their brilliant colors, sounds, and activities of the beach culture. Surfers bob out on the water as comfortable in their environment as any marine species, and divers ready their gear, heading for the underwater world of the kelp forest where sounds, colors, and sensations are radically different from terrestrial life.

A kayaker mentioned once that when he paddles down along the coast following the old Chumash routes, the Arroyo Sequit landscape stands out. "It is still really beautiful," he says, "and I know that I, too, would have sited my village here, just as the Chumash did." It is easy to understand why Chumash settlements occurred here. The site offered everything necessary for comfortable living -- shellfish, kelp and other seaweeds, wetland plants, seeds, acorns, berries, roots, bulbs, trout, and numerous species of game. There were freshwater sources and rocky shorelines, as well as sandy beaches from which to launch tomols. There were dry, grassy terraces on which to site coastal villages, and upland areas for retreat and seasonal hunting and gathering. There was access to major trails routed along the coastline, out over the water, and deep into the mountains along Arroyo Sequit.

When vegetation allows passage, a hike up Arroyo Sequit is a walk into another world, a riparian environment that remains essentially unchanged since Chumash times. Sycamore canopies shade the stream course as it narrows and steepens in the enclosing canyon walls. In his book, "Happy Days in Southern California" (1898), Frederick Rindge describes a canyon very much like Arroyo Sequit where a stone grotto looks out into a canopy of sycamores. He talks of following the Sequit to its headwaters, of the shaded pools where trout lived, of fern banks, and the enclosing canyon walls. He felt compelled to describe how much this world of the canyon meant to him, speaking referentially of mineral springs, waterfalls, and the "brooks" whose gifts brought refreshment and life to grasses, trees, and the human soul, whose laughter made poets sing.

The canyons along the Malibu coast have a long association with mystery and intrigue. Much of Leo Carrillo State Beach was once part of the Topanga Sumo Sequit land grant held by the Tapia family. Local community folklore has it that a treasure hoard of gold and silver coin was buried on the rancho, variously dug up, transported, or smuggled from coastal canyons. Infamous bandits used to to hide and make their camps there. Frederick Rindge himself claimed to know where the desperate bandit Nicolas leaped over a precipice rather than be taken alive by Mexicans who had trailed him to his mountain hideaway.

In "The California I Love" (1961), Leo Carrillo recalls a story about his great-great-grandfather Jose Raimundo Carrillo, a mighty hunter, who in searching for mountain lions up Malibu Sequit Canyon, had a fateful meeting with La Lechuza, the Owl Woman -- the cave dweller of California. Carrillo said, "My father told me this story at the cave itself in Malibu Sequit Canyon when I was very small.... I think perhaps her spirit has blessed me, as she in person blessed my great-great-grandfather. At least I like to believe so and to express my thanks, too, to La Lechuza." Leo Carrillo, who served fourteen years as a state Park and Recreation Commissioner, was always aware that his ancestors were connected in spirit to many of the lands he helped "set aside forever for the people of California." He believed that he was fulfilling what his ancestors would express to him if they could. When the lands around the mouth of Arroyo Sequit Canyon became part of the Los Penasquitos Natural Preserve, within Torrey Pines State Reserve, is established to provide for the protection and perpetuation of natural resource values associated with the lagoon and wetlands. Primary values, in descending order of significance, are: 1) the native estuarine plant and animal communities, 2) state and federally listed rare, endangered, and threatened plants and animals. 3) freshwater-riparian plant and animal communities, and 4) plants and animals designated by the department as of special interest. Secondary values include recreational opportunities which directly relate to and do not detract from the primary resource values.

The principal long-range objective of management of the preserve shall be to restore and maintain the estuarine water cycle in a regime which approaches that which existed prior to 1925, before major modifications were made. This may require purposeful modifications to the hydrologic system. It is acknowledged that over geologic time, sea inlets were silted in to form marshes and eventually terrestrial valleys. However, this process at Los Penasquitos has been rapidly accelerated over the last 60 years by human activities.

Note: The general plan (page 31) indicates that this declaration of purpose is an improvement over an early declaration prepared by staff "in the mid-1960s" but not taken to the Commission. The text of this earlier declaration is provided and is as follows:

Los Penasquitos Marsh Natural Preserve, within Torrey Pines State Reserve, is established to provide for the protection for public enjoyment, in an essentially natural condition, of the marsh and other wetland values which exist between the north beach parking area on the north, the railroad right-of-way on the east, the 20-foot topographic contour on the south, and the North Torrey Pines Road on the north. Public uses will be restricted to those which can be accommodated on the perimeters of the marsh and wetlands area without impairing the values of the area. The management undertaking for the Los Penasquitos Marsh will attempt to establish the water cycle in a regime which as nearly as possible approaches that which existed in pristine times.

An effort will be made to acquire all wetlands in lower Soledad Valley not now a part of the state reserve.

The Department shall define and execute a program of management to perpetuate the unit's declared values, and provide recreational facilities and interpretation that make these values available in a manner consistent with their perpetuation.

06/1995 - Spirit of Place Statement

Spirit of place refers to qualities that make a place memorable - that create impressions we take away with us. Tangible features we see, hear, smell, and feel all imprint our senses whether we are aware of it or not. Together, they make up the intangible spirit that we recall.

Each person brings his or her own expectations and preferences to a place, with senses focused upon particular aspects of the surroundings, so each takes away his or her private version of the spirit of the place. However, we as park planners must assume that some elements of the park experience are shared and universal. This allows us to assess the spirit of place of the state parks with which we deal and to strive to enhance aspects of those places that will most enrich a spirit conducive to a high quality park experience.

MacKerricher State Park is long and narrow, flanked by the ocean for its entire length. Because of this, all of the park is influenced by the sea and the restless, moisture-laden air it engenders. The ocean is visible from many parts of the park. Sea smells fill our lungs. On the other hand, the park embraces a wide variety of landforms and vegetation types, each with its own particular potential for inspiring feelings and memories. People are plentiful in some parts of the park's landscape during the busy season, while they are few in others.

Consequently, the park actually has many spirits of place. Design criteria for developments proposed in the Facilities Element are intended to assure that park improvements will respect and foster the spirit of place of each of the many varied areas within the park.

Malibu Creek SP #537

02/1977 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

Malibu Creek State Park encompasses an area of outstanding natural and scenic beauty and includes interesting and varied types of biotic communities, land forms, and geologic features, all of which make up its mountains, valleys, streamsides, rugged canyons, and picturesque rock outcroppings. Individual natural resources of special significance include the valley oak which is near the southernmost limit of its natural range; the Malibu Creek and gorge are with its scenic riparian vegetation; and the oak-bay woodland south and west of Century Lake.

Cultural resources include Indian sites showing past Indian occupation of the oak woodland areas; other evidence indicates that man occupied this area as early as 3,000 B.C. The more recent evidences of the activities of man here include ranching and film making.

The primary purpose of Malibu Creek State Park is to protect and perpetuate in an essentially natural condition and as an ecological entity the woodland character of the picturesque mountain features; and to make available to the public, in a manner compatible with these values and features the environmental amenities and the recreational and educational opportunities which the unit resources provide.

01/1977 - General Development Plan

Malibu Creek State Park encompasses an area of outstanding natural and scenic beauty and includes interesting and varied types of biotic communities, land forms, and geologic features, all of which make up its mountains, valleys, streamsides, rugged canyons, and picturesque rock outcroppings. Individual natural resources of special significance include the valley oak which is near the southernmost limit of its natural range; the Malibu Creek and gorge are with its scenic riparian vegetation; and the oak-bay woodland south and west of Niko Reservoir.

Cultural resources include Indian sites showing past Indian occupation of the oak woodland areas; other evidence indicates that man occupied this area as early as 3,000 B.C. The more recent evidences of the activities of man here include ranching and film making.

The primary purpose of Malibu Creek State Park is to protect and perpetuate in an essentially natural condition and as an ecological entity the woodland character of the picturesque mountain features; and to make available to the public, in a manner compatible with these values and features the environmental amenities and the recreational and educational opportunities which the unit resources provide.

09/1978 - General Development Plan

The primary purposes of Malibu Lagoon State Beach are: to provide a place for beach-oriented recreation activities on the sandy beach fronting the ocean; to preserve and interpret the marsh and lagoon habitat so as to perpetuate the many species of animals that require this diminishing resource for survival; to provide a permanent scenic and open-space environment for an area that is rapidly growing and becoming heavily developed; and to preserve, maintain, mitigate, and interpret the Adamson House and other cultural resources of the area.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Malibu Lagoon State Beach is established to make available to the public for outdoor recreational activities the sandy beach and related scenic estuarine and riparian resources in the vicinity of and surrounding Malibu Lagoon in Los Angeles County. The sandy ocean beach is the prime resource and the developments shall be made for the purpose of making the beach available to the public for outdoor recreational activities. The lagoon is scenically and ecologically important in relation to the beach and shall be preserved in an essentially natural condition. Significant archeological values are present within the State Beach and shall be protected by preservation or research and interpretation for public enlightenment and enjoyment. Other cultural values present within the State Beach shall be reviewed in relation to the prime outdoor recreational resources and of the unit.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

To make available for day use a sandy beach with 1,000 feet of ocean frontage and to perpetuate a southern coastal lagoon and the bird life it supports.

The purpose of Manchester State Park is to make available to the people for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, in an essentially natural condition, the outstanding scenic features and natural values, including offshore marine environs and submerged lands; the coastline embracing stretches of sandy beach and the coastal bluffs; the unique coastal dunes; the wetland complexes including the Lagoons and other water features of Alder Creek, Brush Creek, Lagoon Creek, and the Lake Davis complex; the low marine terraces; the geology and plant and animal life; the significant historical and archeological resources; and the scientific values therein.

The department shall define and execute a program of management to perpetuate the unit's declared values; and provide recreational facilities and interpretation that make these values available in a manner consistent with their perpetuation.

12/1992 - Spirit of Place Statement

"The Spirit of this Place" - (page 6)

West and ahead of the Mendocino coast, the sturdy white column of the Point Arena lighthouse rises atop a great eroded peninsula of earth and rock, whose cliffs stand fifty, now eighty feet above the tides. Along the foot of this great horizontal plateau flow the waters of the Garcia River out to the sea, and a great ocean beach runs north unbroken, mile lengthening into mile. Beginning in a desert of dunes and sand plains of the wind and water's making, the shore curves inland toward the continent in a long arc, stretching north some four miles to the mouth of Alder Creek, where the earth cliff, rising again, is cut briefly by the narrow gorge of the creek, then standing as a rugged vertical wall across the face of the Mendocino coastline.

In this broad and shallow basin, north from the lighthouse and south of the Alder Creek bluffs, the land fronting the sea is a progress of long undulation, now level, then hollows and mounded hills here and there, revealing the barren moorland character of the country just above. Cliff and dune, the plain of the ocean and the far, bright horizon, meadowland and marsh and ancient moor, lagoon, lake, forest, grassland, beach and stream: this is Manchester State Park. Sun and moon set in the sea, the arched sky has an ocean vastness, the fog appears over the ocean, now blankets the earth, the surf flings its spray against the sun. Journeying birds alight here and fly away again, all unseen; schools of great fish move beneath the waves, and the deer graze in the quiet of the dusk. The flux and reflux of oceans, the sighing of wind, the pilgrimages of people to the sea - all these are part of its beauty and mystery.

The sea is the counterpoint to the land - both contrast and complement. The vast horizontality and seeming restlessness of the sea are in sharp contrast to the verticality and stolid bulwark of the cliffs and the Point Arena lighthouse - yet there is complement in the horizontal profile of the land, in the undulating waves of dune and grassland and the coursing of water in streams and through marsh. The meeting of land and sea and sky speaks of variation on a theme of generous open space: the spaciousness of undeveloped land, the endless sea disappearing into the horizon, the immense expanse of sky.

This vast and primitive landscape offers vital hope for the future. Here at the terrestrial fringe, the complexity and fragility of life are demonstrated forcefully. The beauty of the landscape and the magnetism of the sea, whether consciously felt or not, modify the objectives and response of all who come to the park seeking recreation. The resulting activities, though often dissimilar, derive their essential meaning from the inherent qualities of these resources. Today, annual visitation of Manchester State Park is exceeding 40,000, even though much of the land is unavailable for active recreation. Since it is one of the windiest and foggiest spots on the Mendocino coast, it is apparently something more than simply a place to play.

Manchester State Park can best be described perhaps as a relict of the aboriginal California coast, serving as a vital and convenient outlet to a people becoming more and more pressured by the urgency of today. To many, it represents a last frontier - so near to urban populations, yet remaining relatively unviolated by the symbols of contemporary life. The primitiveness of this vast horizontal landscape, inextricably connected to the sea, contains few reminders of the urgency of today, and in this condition, it serves the present as usefully as any piece of land could.

Marconi Conference Center SHP #213

10/1992 - General Plan

The purpose of Marconi is to make available to the people for their edification and enjoyment, and preserve for future generations, the outstanding historic features associated with the development of modern communication technology, the surrounding landscape and natural values, and to make conference facilities available to the people for their use and enjoyment. The Department shall define and execute a program of management to perpetuate the unit's declared values, and provide recreational facilities and historical interpretation that makes these values available in a manner consistent with their perpetuation.

10/1992 - Spirit of Place Statement

Marconi contains special and unique attributes which produce its own "spirit of place." This spirit is based on development of the Marconi wireless telecommunication station and the rural setting. The key ingredients which produce these attributes are based on:

- * Aspects of the natural environment such as land form and topography, vegetation, climate, and the presence of water.
- * Cultural expressions such as significant buildings and structures which complement the landscape, social history, and human activities.
- * the sensory experience, primarily visual, which results from the interaction of culture and landscape.

A strong sense of place is based on such items as:

- * Architectural style
- * Climate
- * Natural Setting
- * Use of local materials
- * Craftsmanship
- * Sensitivity in the siting of important buildings and structures

The hotel is a strong visual landmark that helps identify Marconi within the local community. The hotel and the other historic buildings provide the area with a connection to the past. High-quality detail permeates the historic building, and contributes to overall quality and spirit. There is an image that was created with the relationship between forest and historic structures. There is a strong sense of enclosure, wind protection, and a special "forest island" created by the forest/vegetation. Marconi's uniqueness is also derived from its close proximity and sloping aspect to Tomales bay. The preservation of Tomales Bay and its landforms, the surrounding open space, and agricultural lands are important to maintaining the spirit and character of Marconi. The care used in the site planning of the historic buildings, the organization of functions, and the concern for visual orientation still permeates one's experience at Marconi.

McArthur-Burney Falls Memorial SP #125

06/1997 - General Plan

The purpose of McArthur-Burney Falls Memorial State Park is to present the falls as a scenic wonder and to make available for inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, in an essentially natural condition, the outstanding scenic features and natural values of the park. These include Burney Falls and the lower canyon of Burney Creek; the scenic mountain and forest landscapes typical of the southern Cascade Mountain Range, the riparian habitats associated with Burney Creek and Lake Britton, the seasonally wet meadows the variety of forest, Sierra mixed-coniferous forest, black oak woodlands and Oregon white oak woodlands; the geology, plant and animal life; the significant historical and archaeological resources; and the scientific values therein.

The natural, scenic, and cultural resources associated with these lands are entrusted to the Department of Parks and Recreation for stewardship in perpetuity. The department's mission is to protect these resources and prescribe and implement a program of resource management to perpetuate the park's declared values. The department will provide opportunities for safe, enjoyable, and educational experiences in a primarily natural setting. This will be accomplished through well-planned facilities, programs, visitor services, and maintenance. Park management shall regulate visitor uses as necessary to keep them compatible with the perpetuation of park resources.

06/1997 - Vision Statement

Aesthetic Resources and Spirit of Place:

The plateau upon which the park lies was once a tranquil place. The Pit River, almost too distant to be heard, sighed from the depths of its canyon. Burney Canyon resounded with the roar of the falls and the cheerful gush of the creek. Forests of conifers and oaks interspersed with lush meadows clothed the plateau, the scattered hills, and the slopes of the canyons. The area abounded with a wide variety of animals. The people who were fortunate enough to live in this place before Euro-American settlers came revered the falls as sacred.

Changes to this scene began slowly but escalated during the twentieth century. After settlement of the Pacific Coast and the birth of California, this remote part of the state retained its isolation. Well into the twentieth century, paved roads were rare, and the sounds of construction were fleeting. The park area still remains far from the lights of the city, and clear nights reveal thousands of stars and the Milky Way, now hidden from most urban dwellers.

Within the last few decades, more and more vacationers have sought the solitude of northeastern California and come to the park. Now, the park's developed areas reflect its popularity. Buildings, roads, and parking lots dominate the landscape near the falls. Pedestrians, bicycles, and automobiles crowd park roads. Damming the Pit River has created a bright lake with a swim beach jammed with adults and children when the weather is warm. Motorboats, waterskiers, and jet skiers roar by. Scents of campfires and automobile omissions sometimes vie for the attention of visitors who have come to breathe the fresh and vibrant air. A major highway now carries traffic, including thunderous trucks, to within 800 feet of the falls, flooding the surrounding picnic grounds, visitor center, and campfire center with noise during most of the day and early evening. On a busy day, the falls' roar is audible only at the canyon rim.

It is during the quieter parts of the year that some of the ancient tranquility returns. However, asphalt and compacted earth remain, although sometimes hidden beneath a soothing blanket of snow.

Spirit of place refers to qualities that imprint upon peoples' senses and make a place memorable. What people see, hear, smell, and feel create an intangible spirit they can later recall. However, people bring their own expectations and preferences to a place, with senses focused upon particular aspects of their surroundings. Therefore, each visitor takes away his or her private version of the sense of a place.

Department visitor surveys reveal that some visitors felt their time at the park was tainted by the placement of facilities and the level of development. Some comments were: "Too overrated, too overcrowded."; "There is a lot of motor traffic through campground to lake - cars driving up and back." Others offered suggestions such as: "Move parking lot next to falls to area of picnic tables - that would improve natural area next to falls that has been made very sterile."

On the other hand, most visitors tended to overlook such intrusions, perhaps because they didn't arrive expecting a primarily natural experience. Thus visitor surveys also contain many enthusiastic comments: "You have a gorgeous park here!" "This is the closest we'll get to heaven here on earth. We'll be back next year"; "Beautiful escape." Some families return year after year: "We have been coming here for the past 10 years and we LOVE the park."

However, general planning for this park has been based on the assumptions that there are negative aspects of the park experience that a majority of the visitors share, either consciously or subconsciously. Therefore, this plan has been prepared with the intention of improving and enhancing the park's spirit of place. In the future, visitors should be better able to experience the park's inherent natural qualities with less impact from built intrusions, especially near the falls. Unhindered by distracting developments, individuals will approach the falls with a restored sense of anticipation, arrival, and wonder at the great roar and grandeur of the plunging white water - a primal force that has shaped this land.

McArthur-Burney Falls Memorial SP #125

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The Purpose of McArthur-Burney Falls Memorial State Park is to preserve, in its natural relationship of forest and stream, Burney Falls, together with Burney Creek above the falls extending to include the springs which furnish the summer flows for the fall, and extending downstream to include the nearby shores of Lake Britton. The area supports an outstanding ponderosa pine forest which shall be managed in the vicinity of the falls to provide the essential natural and aesthetic background for the falls themselves. Other portions of the forest may be managed to provide overnight and day use recreational activities for people visiting the fall. Lake Britton offers recreational opportunities, including boating, swimming, fishing, and sightseeing, and these recreational resources will be managed to provide secondary recreational experiences for park visitors. Significant archeological and historical features existing within the park will be protected and interpreted for public enjoyment.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

To make available to the public by overnight and day use 485 acres of forested land and reservoir frontage and to protect and perpetuate the beauty of Burney Falls and an example of a rapidly rising steam typical of lava country.

(undated) - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

The primary objective and obligation of the Department of Parks and Recreation to the McArthur Burney Falls Memorial State Park is to protect, preserve and interpret the Burney Falls and its headwaters within the park boundaries in a manner stipulated in the conveyance of the pioneer McArthur family in the State of California.

The Department of Parks and Recreation must furnish those functions, facilities and services which will accomplish the above and provide forever experiences of maximum inspirational and recreational values for the people of the state through the appropriate use and enjoyment of the outstanding resources of the park.

07/1979 - General Plan

McGrath State Beach was established to make available the sandy ocean beach and related uplands in the vicinity of the mouth of the Santa Clara River in Ventura County for public recreational use and enjoyment. In general, all public outdoor recreational activities which relate well to the ocean and which can be accommodated without impairing the scenic or natural integrity of the site, may be provided.

McGrath Lake and the Santa Clara River mouth are recognized for their outstanding natural features and shall be managed to protect and perpetuate the river and seashore lake (sic) ecosystems.

02/1976 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

The purpose of McGrath State Beach is to preserve a significant coastal area, while at the same time providing the public with an opportunity for camping and other outdoor activities. Thorough interpretation of these outdoor experiences will provide a better understanding of the natural beauty and history of the area.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at McGrath State Beach is to manage the resources and preserve their ecological significance. This should be the foremost consideration, in addition to providing services and facilities deemed necessary to assure the utmost enjoyment by the visiting public.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of McGrath State Beach is to protect as an outdoor recreational resource the ocean beach with related uplands immediately downcoast from the mouth of the Santa Clara River in Ventura County. McGrath Lake, a small body of fresh or brackish water, is included in the upland area of the State Beach. Developments shall not impair the scenic integrity of the State Beach. Developments may be made to provide for the enhancement of recreational opportunities related to the public enjoyment of the sandy beach and associated values.

Mendocino Headlands SP #158

03/1976 - General Development Plan

The primary purpose of Mendocino Headlands State Park is to make available to the people its outstanding scenic, natural, educational, and historical values, existing in a relatively small area, which extends from the mouth of Big River upcoast to Russian Gulch and includes the estuary of Big River. The scenic values are as spectacular as any found on the California coast, and include both the quaintness of the historic Mendocino City and the boldness of the wave-sculptured Mendocino Headlands.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Mendocino Headlands State Park is established to provide protection, for public enjoyment forever, for the natural and scenic environment extending from the mouth of Big River upcoast and embracing the shoreline feature known as Mendocino Headlands. The primary objective in managing the natural and scenic resources of the unit will be maintain a high quality environment as background for the historic community of Mendocino City and provide for the protection and interpretation of archeological and historical resources occurring within the park. Archeological and historical values occurring within the park will be afforded full protection.

06/1975 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

The purpose of Mendocino Headlands State Park is to make available to the public for their inspiration, education, and appropriate use, the Park's outstanding beaches and headlands which are the foreground for the living historic community of Mendocino.

The function of the Operations Division of the Department of Parks and Recreation is to manage and interpret the cultural and natural resources and values of the park, and to provide such facilities and services, consistent with the purpose of the park, as are necessary for the full enjoyment of the park by visitors.

Mono Lake Tufa SR #366

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Mono Lake Tufa State Reserve, in Mono County, is to preserve and protect portions of the remnant of a vast ancient sea and the residual lake's rare and fragile tufa formations, the products of geologic activity ranging from the Ice Age to the present time. Located on a heavily faulted, volcanically active high plateau between the Sierra Nevada and the White Mountains, at the western edge of the Great Basin, the unit exhibits an austere beauty and provides a sweeping view of the sheer eastern escarpment of the Sierra Nevada. Lacking a natural outlet, Mono Lake is extremely saline and alkaline. Its waters, along with the lake's islands and shoreline, provide feeding grounds and nesting areas for vast numbers of birds, including California gulls, snowy plovers, phalaropes and eared grebes, and offer an important resting area for a variety of migratory waterfowl and songbirds.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, scientific, cultural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits. The department will work cooperatively with other entities to further these objectives.

11/1989 - General Plan

The purpose of Mount Diablo State Park is to make available to the people for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, in essentially natural condition, the outstanding scenic features including the summit peaks and surrounding landscape; the outstanding natural values including geology and plant and animal life; the significant historical and archeological resources; and the scientific values therein.

The department shall define and execute a program of management to perpetuate the unit's declared values, and provide recreational facilities and interpretation that make these values available in a manner consistent with their perpetuation.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Mt. Diablo is one of the most prominent scenic natural and ecological feature in the San Francisco East Bay Region. Mount Diablo State park is established, managed and operated to protect it for public enjoyment in an essentially natural condition forever. The natural scenic and ecological features of Mount Diablo lie generally within the limits described by the Marsh Creek Road on the north, by the upper Marsh Creek watershed on the east, by the Black Hawk Road on the south, and by the urban limits of the cities of Walnut Creek, Concord, and Pleasant Hill on the west. The management objective is to maintain the resources of the park in as nearly a natural condition as possible with a minimum of scenic disturbance and ecological disruption. Recreational facilities for day and overnight uses may be provided for enhancement of the visitor experience on Mount Diablo. Archeological and historical features existing within the unit will be identified, protected and interpreted for the enjoyment of the public.

03/1973 - Interpretive Perspectus - Proposal Only

The purpose of Mount Diablo State Park is to preserve, for all time, the integrity of the mountain, its significant historical, archeological, ecological and geological values, so that visitors of all ages may experience for their enlightenment, inspiration and enjoyment, a relaxed, uncluttered atmosphere, embracing grassland, chaparral and oak woodland environments.

The function of the California State Department of Parks and Recreation at Mount Diablo State park is to manage the resources of the park as a composite whole, preserving them in accordance with sound ecological principles; to interpret these resources to the people, and to provide the simplest facilities for picnicking, hiking, and camping, consistent with the purpose set forth above.

Mount San Jacinto Wilderness State Park is generally characterized by the granite peaks, sub-alpine forests, and mountain meadows of the San Jacinto Mountains of Riverside County in Southern California; and most particularly by the great escarpment facing east to the desert, which is the highest of its type in the United States. The purpose of the Park is to hold inviolate these magnificent wilderness features, for the use, inspiration, and enjoyment of the people.

Serving the wilderness portions of the Park from the east is the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway, which originates at the foot of the eastern escarpment in Chino Canyon, and rises dramatically to the threshold of the wilderness several thousand feet above. Operating under the jurisdiction of the Mount San Jacinto Winter Park Authority, the Aerial Tramway provides approach to the wilderness portions of the park, and also opportunities for recreational experiences both summer and winter in the area immediately surrounding its upper terminus.

The Division of Beaches and Parks shall prescribe and execute a management program for Mount San Jacinto Wilderness State Park designed to perpetuate the wilderness resources of the Park while making them available for public use and enjoyment, taking full cognizance of the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway as an access and recreational facility; shall defend the wilderness resources of the Park against modification or violation; shall interpret effectively the park values of this outstanding area; and shall provide such facilities and services, consistent with the declared park purpose, as are necessary for the enjoyment by visitors of the wilderness and recreational resources of the Park.

Pfeiffer Big Sur SP #448

10/1999 - General Plan

The purpose of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park is to protect and preserve the quintessential essence of California's Big Sur coast, including one of the most southerly and accessible groves of coast redwoods, its Big Sur River riparian corridor, and the Park's historic CCC-era facilities, while providing opportunities for the visiting public to fully involve themselves in the recreational, interpretive and inspirational enlightenment and enjoyment of the Park's outstanding natural, cultural and scenic features.

To accomplish this purpose, the California State Park System intends to manage the Park resources for the continuing scenic, interpretive, scientific and recreational benefits of present and future generations. Park management shall guide the recovery of natural processes and features in the Park toward the balances that existed prior to the arrival of Euro-Americans.

Within the redwood grove & riparian habitat areas, restoration and preservation are primary considerations, with interpretation about wildland resources and ecological processes sharing that primary role. Of secondary consideration within the redwood grove and riparian areas, and of primary consideration in all other areas of the Park, will be the preservation and appropriate uses of CCC-era structures.

10/1999 - Sense of Place

The spiritual essence of California's giant redwoods is captured within the boundaries of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, very near the limit of the trees' natural southernmost distribution. As the centerpiece State Park of the magnificent Big Sur coast, the Park serves a wider statewide role as one of the key showcases for these venerable, giant redwoods, displaying the magnificence and beauty that nature has bestowed upon them. Although only a relatively few old growth redwoods survive among the forest of maturing second growth trees, there exists the feeling of an ancient forest standing guard over the meandering Big Sur River.

As the excitement and crowds of summer thin to a few off-season campers, a quietness pervades the venerable redwood groves. The rustle of leaves, the chatter of a squirrel, the chance glance of a deer or much rarer mountain lion, especially along the back country trails, mark the beginning of renewal for the Park. Winter's coming rains wash clean the river, adding wrinkles of time to the hillsides and cliffs as the rushing waters push a new supply of much needed sand towards the Pacific Ocean. Water soaks the ground quenching summer's thirst as the roots of redwoods and oaks, alders and sycamores drink deep in anticipation of the coming spring's growth. As winter's rains wane, the cycle of life begins anew as wildflowers burst forth spreading their future descendents across the broad mountains and narrow valleys. Seeds fall from trees and delicate new growth springs from the tips of branches and from the brown coat of mother earth. Then its time for the returning crowds of summer and for the cycle to repeat.

Nearly 100 years have passed since human intervention began to have any significant impacts on the annual cycle of renewal here. Now, each year, as increasing numbers of visitors come to enjoy the beauty and the solitude, nature struggles to recover from their unintentional impacts. With the popularity of State Parks continuing to increase, as does the population of California and her citizens' demands for quality recreational experiences, original management strategies no longer can protect the valuable natural and cultural resources of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park.

10/1999 - Vision Statement

The vision for the future of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park is that it shall again become world renowned as the southernmost showcase for California's coast redwoods by restoring and protecting the primal forest conditions that originally attracted settlers and visitors to this area of the Big Sur coast. The Park will provide a window into the rugged lands that lie in the adjacent Ventana Wilderness and will serve as an indicator of the environmental health of the Santa Lucia Mountain Range.

07/1990 - Resource Element

The purpose of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park is to make available to the people forever, for their inspiration, understanding, and enjoyment, an outstanding segment of Monterey County, extending from the Los Padres National Forest to Pfeiffer Ridge. Included in this unit are the Big Sur River and its tributaries, coast redwoods, wooded canyons, and coastal mountains. All scenic, natural, and historic values of the park are protected.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park is to manage the park in such a manner as to insure (sic) their perpetuation; to provide facilities and services for appropriate public recreational activities; to interpret the park resources fully and effectively; and to acquire lands needed to embrace and protect the stated values; all in accordance with the declared purpose.

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Placerita Canyon State Park, in Los Angeles County, is to preserve and protect the site of the first discovery of gold in California, in 1842. Designated as a State Historic Landmark, the unit is situated in the transition zone between the San Gabriel Mountains and the Mojave Desert, and contains sandstone formations, seasonal streams and riparian oak woodlands, as well as stands of cottonwood and native sycamore trees. The unit's location provides significant linkages connecting the Angeles National Forest, the Santa Susana Mountains, the Simi Hills and the Santa Monica Mountains. The unit contains the remnants of an historic ranch.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural and aesthetic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits. The department will work cooperatively with other entities to further these objectives.

Plumas-Eureka SP #321

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Plumas-Eureka State Park, in Plumas County, is to preserve and protect the site of a particularly rich late nineteenth century hardrock gold mining district, with its extensive network of underground tunnels and, on the surface, a large complex of support facilities and structures. The unit's historic district is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and includes such features as the Mohawk Stamp Mill, an assay office, a livery stable, a blacksmith shop and an historic hydroelectric plant. The unit is set in the Sierra Nevada ecological region, and contains upper montane and subalpine flora and fauna. The unit provides important wildlife corridors and trail connections to adjacent public lands.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's cultural, natural and aesthetic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - General Plan Policy Committee

Plumas-Eureka State Park is established to provide for the protection, in an essentially natural condition for public use and enjoyment, of Eureka Peak with its related environments, including Eureka Bowl which shall be preserved unspoiled, and the watershed of Jameson Creek from the vicinity of the town of Johnsville upstream to its headwaters, excluding within this area the lands of the U. S. Forest Service, upon which compatible management undertakings will be sought. The park is also established to make possible the preservation and interpretation of remaining evidences of mining activities in the area, including the structure of the Eureka Stamp Mill, and the Johnsville Lodge. Recreational activities may be undertaken within the area provided no permanent or damaging impacts on the cultural or natural environments are foreseen. Winter sports activities may occur on the slopes below Eureka Lake provided no clearing of vegetation is required, and provided that no invasion of winter sports activities may occur in Eureka Bowl.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

Point Mugu SP #573

02/1977 - Interpretive Perspectus - Proposal Only

The purpose of Point Mugu State Park is to preserve, interpret and develop for public use and enjoyment, the unique natural blending of canyon, grassland, mountain and seacoast resources. Included in this natural blending are the prime resource values of La Jolla Valley natural preserve, Chumash Indian archaeological sites and scenic vistas.

At Point Mugu State Park, the function of the Department of Parks and Recreation is to protect the resources and values of the area, to prescribe and execute appropriate programs which will provide opportunities for public use and enjoyment in accordance with the declaration of purpose for this unit.

01/1977 - General Development Plan

The primary purpose of Point Mugu State Park is to preserve the outstanding scenic, natural, and cultural values found in the Santa Monica Mountains and Point Mugu State Seashore, which consists of lands extending from Ormond Beach to San Nicholas Canyon and including Mugu Lagoon, Point Mugu State Park and Leo Carrillo State Beach, all within Ventura and Los Angeles counties (Section 5001.6, Public Resources Code); and to enable the public to visit, see, understand, and enjoy these resources through the effective execution of programs for interpretation, recreational use, and development.

The purpose of State Seashores is to preserve outstanding natural scenic, cultural, ecological, and recreational values of the California coastline as an ecological region, and to make possible the enjoyment of the coastline and of the related recreational activities which are consistent with the preservation of the principal values and which contribute to the public enjoyment, appreciation, and understanding of these values.

As a part of Point Mugu State Seashore, Point Mugu State Park contains outstanding values as outlined above. Outstanding recreational values include the sandy beaches. Outstanding scenic values include the rocky promontories and sandy beaches, and vista of the Channel Islands and the Santa Monica Mountains complex. Outstanding natural values include the sidehill dunes ecosystem, and the nearby Point Mugu Lagoon. Outstanding cultural values include the village sites in La Jolla Valley and "Shuwalashu", which have been almost totally destroyed.

The primary purpose of La Jolla Valley Natural Preserve is to preserve the valley ecosystem in total, with special consideration to the grassland ecosystem and the associated archeological sites. Of prime interest is the preservation of a representative example of the Stipa tall grass prairie community which existed in California prior to the impact of civilization.

The chaparral and coastal scrub areas may be used by the public for uses relating to the enjoyment of the coastal and mountain scenes, providing such uses do not adversely alter the natural appearance of the area, impair nesting habitats of birds, or otherwise alter the general ecological integrity of these ecosystems.

The oak woodlands of Serrano and Wood canyons deserve special attention as to their natural features and ecological importance in sustaining and providing refuge for animal species. The sycamore savanna of Big Sycamore Canyon is the finest example of this ecosystem found anywhere within the State Park System. This ecosystem will require special attention; much of it should be preserved.

The cultural values of Point Mugu State Park, where they are currently known (see Resource Inventory report) or discovered in the future, will be fully protected and interpreted for public enlightenment and enjoyment. There are many archeological sites in Point Mugu State Park; the prehistoric resources are of great scientific value. Archeological sites are not to be disturbed except for approved archeological research, which is the key to understanding and interpreting the past cultures of Point Mugu.

11/1999 - NPS/DPR General Management Plan/General Plan

Redwood National and State Parks were established to preserve significant examples of the primeval coastal redwood forests and the prairies, streams, seashore, and woodlands with which they are associated for purposes of public inspiration, enjoyment, and scientific study, and to preserve all related scenic, historical, and recreational values.

02/1985 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park embraces the uppermost six miles of the watershed of Prairie Creek, and extends westward to the ocean. It was acquired and established to protect the magnificent forest of coast redwood in the Prairie Creek basin, and was enlarged to include Gold Bluffs and the broad beach along its base, one of the few wilderness beaches remaining in California. Several meadows or prairies, of scenic and ecologic importance, occur in the forest area; there are some structures and remains of regional historical interest, and several Native American sites. All the natural and cultural features of the park are to be protected and managed for the esthetic and educational benefit of the people.

U. S. Highway 101 traverses the center of the park and provides a major means of access to the memorial groves and forests; but its heavy commercial traffic makes recreational travel hazardous, and creates a throbbing din that pervades the entire valley of Prairie Creek. The Department shall do everything reasonably possible to assist in the present construction of the alternate highway on the adopted route lying east of the park boundary.

Visitor uses and facilities shall include those appropriate to the state park classification, and in such location and extent as to encourage understanding and enjoyment of the prime resources of the park without adversely affecting either the resources or the appreciation of them.

The purpose of Providence Mountains State Recreation Area, in San Bernardino County, is to preserve and protect, in an essentially unaltered condition, a remote and spacious high-elevation mountain "island" located on the eastern slopes of the Providence Mountains, in the Mojave Desert area of southern California. The unit features geographically isolated flora and fauna and a panoramic vista of the entire region. The unit contains an extensive but largely unexplored complex of limestone caves, which contains their own unusual but little-known ecosystem. The unit also contains as an item of folk architecture, a very unusual early settler's home constructed largely of a wide array of geologic specimens.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, scientific, cultural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits. The department will work cooperatively with other entities to achieve these objectives.

The purpose of the Providence Mountains State Recreation Area is to make available to the people forever, the recreational opportunities afforded by the southern providence Mountains, including all scenic, scientific, and historical resources of the area. And to make available to the people for their enlightenment, inspiration and enjoyment forever, the outstanding natural Mitchell Caverns, together with the magnificent desert vistas, and all natural, botanical, zoological, geological, archeological, ecological, and other scientific resources inherent to the Mitchell Caverns Natural Preserve.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at the Providence Mountains State Recreation Area is to prescribe and execute a management program for the protection, perpetuation and enhancement of the recreational values of the Providence Mountains State Recreation Area; and to preserve, display, and interpret the natural Mitchell Caverns and their surroundings for the inspiration, enlightenment and enjoyment of the people forever.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Providence Mountains State Recreation Area is to make possible the public enjoyment of the recreational opportunities afforded by the eastern slopes of the Providence Mountains in the vicinity of Mitchell Caverns in San Bernardino County. There exists within the Recreation Area an outstanding limestone cave complex which, together with its surrounding lands, will be fully protected and preserved in an essentially natural condition for the passive enjoyment of the public. Outside the area of Mitchell Caverns, all those public outdoor recreational opportunities which are afforded by the area may be made available to the people provided there is no damage

Samuel P. Taylor SP #233

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Samuel P. Taylor State Park, in Marin County, is to preserve and protect a steep, rugged canyon in the Coast Range northwest of San Francisco Bay. The unit includes stands of coastal redwood and related flora. A length of Lagunitas Creek, with its associated riparian corridor, provides spawning grounds for coho salmon. The unit's connection with large areas of federal parkland provides habitat for bobcats and mountain lions. The unit contains the site of the early paper mill and powder mill of early settler Samuel Taylor, as well as Taylor's grave and the site of Camp Taylor, the region's first redwood recreation area, popular at the turn of the century. The unit's lands provide linkages for a number of regional trails.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, interpret and manage the unit's cultural, natural and scenic resources, features and values, making the available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Samuel P. Taylor State Park is established to make available for public use and enjoyment the redwood forested area lying along Lagunitas Creek between Bolinas Ridge and Barnaby mountain in Marin County. There are important second growth redwood forest lands within the park, as well as significant scenery and valuable grasslands with related oak and Douglas fir woodlands. The riparian zone along Lagunitas Creek is important as a natural and scenic area. There are archeological values present, and the historic remains of a paper mill once operated within the area of the park by Samuel P. Taylor. Overnight and day use activities, including riding and hiking, are appropriate to the extent that they do not impair the quality or extent of the natural and scenic or historic values which are present.

02/1974 - Interpretive Perspectus - Proposal Only

The purpose for Samuel P. Taylor State Park is to preserve and make available for public use and enjoyment as a natural and historic area a portion of California's north coast mountains and valleys.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Samuel P. Taylor State Park is to prescribe and execute a program for the protection, maintenance, use and interpretation of the natural and cultural resources within the park; making in perpetuity a reasonable charge for use of facilities provided; and giving due recognition to all related natural, historical and appropriate recreational values to be found in the area.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

To make available for overnight and day use this redwood canyon area and to commemorate the site of the first paper mill in California.

Santa Cruz Mission SHP #433

05/1984 - General Plan

The purpose of Santa Cruz Mission State Historic Park is to protect, preserve, interpret, and make available to visitors the historic and esthetic values of early Santa Cruz. The primary resource is the adobe building fronting school Street, constructed during the mission period by Indian laborers, possibly, for Indian family housing. The adobe is representative of the process of acculturation through the Spanish, Mexican, and American historical eras. The structure is on the National Register of Historic Places, and is of statewide significance.

The grounds behind the building were the site of mission period agricultural and housekeeping activities, later Spanish/Mexican features (a bull and bear pen), and the home of a typical 19th century American social/moral organization (Temperance Hall), as well as an ornamental garden. These features deserve protection and interpretation compatible with the primary historical theme of the state historic park.

09/1982 - Resource Management Plan

Same as the Declaration in the General Plan.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Whereas the only historic structure in Santa Cruz Mission State Historic Park is one adobe, which is out of its historic environmental context, and whereas the City of Santa Cruz is interested in acquiring this adobe from the State to develop as a part of a city park because the Adobe is allegedly the oldest structure in Santa Cruz, and, further, whereas the Department of Parks and Recreation owns other historic properties which better serve the heritage preservation and interpretive purposes of the State, it is the purpose and the function of the Department of Parks and Recreation to maintain this unit until a time when the State can transfer the property to the City of Santa Cruz for development as one of their units.

04/1992 - General Plan

The purpose of Shasta State Historic park is to make available to the public the historic business district of the City of Shasta by preserving, restoring, and reconstructing the historic facilities and environment, and interpreting its significance to the settlement of Northern California. Shasta was the pioneer city of Northern California. Shasta was also the major commercial and political center of Northern California from the Gold Rush into the last quarter of the 19th century. Shasta was the transportation hub and crossroads for Trinity, Siskiyou, Modoc, and Shasta Counties, until the arrival of the railroad in 1872. Shasta was the county seat of Shasta County from 1851 to 1888.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Shasta State Historic Park is to plan and execute a program which will preserve, protect, restore, reconstruct, and interpret the historic values, features, and events of Shasta's past.

04/1992 - Spirit of Place Statement

"In some places, where only meadows and forests are visible - not a living creature, not a house, not a stick or stone or remnant of a ruin, and not a sound, not even a whisper to disturb the Sabbath stillness - you will find it hard to believe that there stood at one time a fiercely-flourishing little city, of two thousand or three thousand souls, with its newspaper, fire company, brass band, volunteer militia, bank, hotels, noisy Fourth of July processions and speeches, gambling halls crammed with tobacco smoke, profanity, and rough-bearded men of all nations and colors with tables heaped with gold dust sufficient for the revenues of a German principality - streets crowded and rife with business - town lots worth four hundred dollars a front foot - labor, laughter, music, dancing, swearing, fighting, shooting, stabbing - a bloody inquest and a man for breakfast every morning - everything that delights and adorns existence - all the appointments and appurtenances of a thriving and prosperous and promising young city - and not nothing is left of it at all but a lifeless, homeless solitude. The men are gone, the houses have vanished, even the name of the place is forgotten. In no other land, in modern times, have towns so absolutely died and disappeared as in the old mining regions of California." Mark Twain

Twain's quote brings forth a series of images in one's mind of the people and places of an era long gone. These images personify what it was like to live in a Gold Rush-era town, and the end many of these towns met.

Shasta was one such town. With the discovery of gold, miners of all races and cultures poured into the area in the spring of 1849. There were fortunes to be made in the creeks and the rivers in the hills of Northern California. The town started as a camp where miners got together for socializing, eating, drinking (usually exuberantly), gambling, and the business of living. Soon, permanent structures emerged, and the camp became a thriving town.

The gold in the nearby hills soon became scarce. The miners moved further back into the mountains, and smaller towns sprang up in the surrounding areas. Doctors, lawyers, and businessmen who came to the town as miners soon learned that there was more money to be made by selling goods and services to the other miners than by mining. The town evolved into a wholesale and retail center, a political center, and a distribution center for goods for the surrounding area. Shasta was the terminus of the wagon road, and the head of "Whoa' Navagation." Shasta became known as the Queen City of the Northern Mines. Business was booming. The future looked bright; the railroad was coming north.

But the railroad stopped short of Shasta, and went instead to a place called Poverty Flat, near the Sacramento River. The town slowly lost its prominence as businesses left, and people eventually followed the railroad. In 1888, after 40 years, the county seat moved to the new town of Redding. Shasta did not suffer quite as final a fate as those towns recollected by Mark Twain. Slowly, Shasta declined and fell into ruins. Today, all that remains are a few structures that somehow managed to survive, ruins, and the headstones of the people who lived and died there.

Shasta was alive as any town of its era, but through the influences of a changing world, the town all but died. Shasta is the story of the people, the evolution of technology, and the changing attitudes of an era. This is the spirit of place of Shasta.

Silverwood Lake SRA #592

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Silverwood Lake State Recreation Area, in San Bernardino County, is to preserve and protect the unit's inherent resources, while providing significant water-related and land-based outdoor recreation opportunities proximate to a major urban complex. A reservoir of the State Water Project, Silverwood Lake is situated in the Cajon Pass area, an area historically transversed by Native Americans and early Spanish and American explorers. The unit, located at a transition point between the San Bernardino Mountains and the Mojave Desert, contains high desert plant communities, chaparral, riparian woodlands and mixed hardwood and coniferous forests. The unit's location, nearly surrounded by federal forestlands, makes possible the protection of biological corridors of regional significance.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, recreational, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Silverwood State Recreation Area is established to make possible the public enjoyment of the recreational opportunities afforded by Silverwood Lake, a facility of the California Water Plan on the northern slopes of the San Bernardino Mountains near Cajon Pass in San Bernardino County. All recreational opportunities afforded by the lake and by its shorelands within the Recreation Area may be made available to the public. 10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Sinkyone Wilderness State Park, in Mendocino County, is to preserve and protect a substantial portion of the longest pristine stretch of Pacific Ocean shoreline in California. The unit is an isolated area with sweeping scenic vistas, numerous undammed coastal streams, offshore islands, dramatic high bluffs and headlands with rocky shores and black sand beaches. The unit contains significant old growth coast redwood stands and provides habitat for a variety of endangered plant and animal species. The unit contains significant cultural sites such as Sinkyone Indian village sites and seasonal encampment areas, as well remnants of early Euro-American settlement as former townsites and early logging sites.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits. The department will work cooperatively with other entities to further these objectives.

03/1989 - Resource Element (draft - not approved)

The purpose of Sinkiyone Wilderness State Park is to preserve in perpetuity for the people's inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, in an essentially natural condition, the rugged landscape, scenic beauty, and wildland values; the native vegetation, including old growth redwoods; the wildlife and naturally functioning ecosystems; the geology displayed in rocky shorelines and black sand beaches; and the history and significant cultural features of human occupation and activity. All scenic, natural, cultural, and recreational resources shall be managed as a whole, preserving and restoring the character of the land in accordance with ecological principles.

The function of the California Department of Parks and Recreation at Sinkiyone Wilderness State Park is to manage the unit's varied, interdependent resources to ensure the perpetuation of the diverse environmental complexes; to interpret them effectively; and to provide, consistent with perpetuation of park resource valules, such facilities and services as are necessary for the public's access and enjoyment of the unit.

The purpose of Sonoma State Historic Park, located in the City of Sonoma, is to provide for the people an opportunity to view a group of historic structures from the Mexican and early American periods in the City of Sonoma. These structures represent religious, military, agricultural, mercantile, and domestic cultural values for the Sonoma area and for the State of California, dating from the founding of the mission in 1823 to the prime period of the Toscano Hotel at the turn of the 20th century.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Sonoma State Historic Park is to foster the preservation, restoration, and interpretation of these various structures, and to develop interpretive displays depicting the personalities and events associated with these structures and surrounding Native American and Euroamerican sites.

08/1976 - Resource Management Plan

It is the prime objective of Sonoma State Historic park to present and interpret materials relative to the terminal period of Hispanic influence in Alta California. The primary theme for historical impact is to be Sonoma, both mission and pueblo, as a Spanish-Mexican buffer colony against incursions by the Russians, the English, and the Americans.

The secondary theme, of nearly equal importance, is Sonoma as a Mexican community and its transition to the American Era marked by the Bear Flag Revolt.

The flow of history will involve the inception of Sonoma as an aspect of Euroamerican expansion into the New World and Sonoma's evolution from an Hispanic colony to an American Town.

The prime theme period shall be from 1823, the date of the establishment of the mission, to 1860, the beginning of the "Industrializing Period" of the American Era.

In accordance with Chapter 1069 of the Statutes of 1957, the purpose of Squaw Valley State Recreation Area is to make available to the people the inestimable and lasting benefits of Squaw Valley and environs as a winter sports area unequalled in the United States, capable of serving as a training ground for future United States winter sports teams, and providing a year-around recreational center for the people of California.

The Function of the Division of Beaches and Parks at Squaw Valley State Recreation Area is to provide the planning, administration, services, and facilities which may be necessary for the full realization of the declared purpose for the Recreation Area.

Note: After Squaw Valley SRA was divested from the State Park System, its unit number (328) was given to the Leland Stanford SHP.

04/1966 - Master Plan Review Committee

The purpose of Squaw Valley State Recreation Area is, in large measure, established by Chapter 1069 of the Statutes of 1957, which reads in part as follows:

"Many facilities to be constructed by the State at Squaw Valley are to be permanent in nature, with the intention that after the games the site will become part of the State Park System. The park would constitute a winter sports area unequalled in the United States, capable of serving as a training ground for future United States winter sports teams, and provide a year-around recreational center for the people of California. The games, therefore, not only will focus the world's attention upon California's Winter (sic) recreational wonderland and promote international good will, but, through the establishment of the site as a permanent State Park, provide inestimable and lasting benefits to the people of this state."

Standish-Hickey SRA #117

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of Standish-Hickey State Recreation Area, in Mendocino County, is to preserve and protect a substantial area of old growth coast redwoods and its very attractive frontage on the South Fork of the Eel River.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural and aesthetic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Standish-Hickey State Recreation Area is to make available to the public for their enjoyment, in a natural setting, of the recreation opportunities afforded by the South Fork Eel River and its nearby banks and uplands in the vicinity of the town of Leggett in Mendocino County. All recreational activities which can be accommodated within the Recreation Area without inflicting permanent damage on the natural or scenic resources may be made available to the public. The resources of the unit may be manipulated or enhanced for the improvement of the public outdoor recreational experience to the extent that the natural atmosphere of the Recreation Area is not altered.

01/1974 - Interpretive Perspectives - Proposal Only

The purpose of Standish-Hickey State Recreation Area is to make available to the people forever, for their use and enjoyment, an area conducive to multiple purpose recreational opportunities. These non-urban outdoor recreational activities are related to, and enhanced by, the South Fork of the Eel River in the vicinity of the mouth of Rock Creek in northern Mendocino County, with scenic and forested slopes, flats and benches and all natural and historical values of the area that contribute to the quality of the experience.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at Standish-Hickey State Recreation Area is to manage all the varied resources of the Park and to provide those functions and services which will provide appropriate recreational experiences to the greatest number of people without impairing the natural, physical, historical or archeological features of the area.

05/1990 - General Plan

The purpose of Sunset Beach is to make available to the public beach-oriented public recreation opportunities, and to protect and perpetuate the coastal dune environment and coastal wetlands, including the native plant and animal associations. The prime recreation resource is the ocean beach.

The function of the California Department of Parks and Recreation at Sunset State Beach is to provide and maintain facilities and to provide public services to assure that high quality public recreation opportunities are available in a natural setting. The department shall also manage the coastal dune and wetland resources for their perpetuation.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Sunset State Beach is to make possible the public use of the sandy ocean beach and related upland resources along the Pacific Ocean shore from the mouth of the Pajaro River upcoast to the downcoast boundary of Manresa State Beach. The wetland resources within the State Beach will be jealously guarded for the preservation of their values for public use and enjoyment. The upland areas may be developed and enhanced for the accommodation of public outdoor recreational activities which are related to the enjoyment of the ocean shore. The quality and extent of the ocean beach resource may not be impaired by the installation of public outdoor recreational facilities.

01/1974 - Interpretive Perspectus - Proposal Only

The purpose of Sunset Beach, established in 1931, is to provide for the people forever, for their enlightenment, inspiration, aesthetic and recreational enjoyment an area of beach, coastal bluff, wetlands and dunes together with their outstanding natural values.

The function of the California Department of Parks and Recreation is to manage the resources as a composite whole; preserving them in accordance with sound ecological principles, to interpret these resources to the people and to provide services and facilities consistent with the preservation of natural, scenic and ecological features while offering maximum recreational opportunities.

(note: there is a separate Declaration of Purpose for each of the unit's four separate parcels)

(1) The primary objective in acquiring the Skylandia Parcel was to provide public ownership of, and access to, the Lake Tahoe shoreline. A side benefit of this acquisition would be restoration and maintenance of the area for the enjoyment of the general public.

Subsequent development will open this area to the public for specific regional area. Development of facilities should be restricted to areas already highly modified by past human activities and where natural values will not be affected. In addition, sections of little disturbance or highly sensitive areas should be preserved, and prudent land use practices enforced.

(2) The primary objective in acquiring the Star Harbor site was to provide public ownership of, and access to, the Lake Tahoe shoreline. A side benefit of this acquisition would be restoration of an area which had deteriorated of the years because of human alterations to adjacent parcels and use of this site as a spoil pile.

Subsequent development will open this area to the public for specific regional recreation uses, and as a support facility to adjacent recreation sites. Development of facilities should be restricted to areas already highly modified by past human activities, and where natural values will not be affected. In addition, sections of little disturbance or highly sensitive areas should be preserved, and increased vegetation encouraged.

(3) The primary objective in acquiring the Truckee River Outlet parcel was for restoration and maintenance of one of Lake Tahoe's significant historical sites. Another benefit of the acquisition is to ensure the public's continued use of the property and access to the Lake Tahoe shoreline.

Subsequent development will open this area to the public for specific regional recreation uses. Development of facilities should be restricted to areas already highly modified by past human activities and where natural values will not be affected. In addition, sections of little disturbance or highly sensitive areas should be preserved, and increased vegetation encouraged.

The Forest of Nisene Marks SP #465

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of The Forest of Nisene Marks State Park, in Santa Cruz County, is to preserve and protect virtually the entire watershed of Aptos Creek, with its notable waterfalls and steelhead habitat. The unit consists of a steep, rugged undeveloped area of mixed evergreen forest, oak woodlands and chaparral. Some of the remaining old-growth coast redwoods exhibit an unusual twisted pattern. The deep, thick forest provides a sense of isolation, while the unit's higher area provides sweeping views of Monterey Bay. The unit contains remnants of the late nineteenth century logging town of Loma Prieta, and was the epicenter of the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of The Forest of Nisene Marks State Park, is to provide for the protection, unimpaired forever, of a second-growth coastal mountains forest embracing coastal redwoods and other native species in an association which has come in naturally on these lands following logging in the 19th century. The lands are to be kept essentially in their natural condition with the prime emphasis on uses being through the utilization of hiking trails giving access throughout the area. The intention is to allow this forest to continue its natural successional development until it becomes a mature forest under the conditions which have existed during its regeneration and successional regrowth. Intensive developments are not to be undertaken, and public uses may be allowed only to an extent which does not interfere with the healthy and natural regeneration of the forest.

The purpose of Tomales Bay State Park, in Marin County, is to preserve and protect lands on both sides of a large, narrow, protected Pacific Ocean bay, noted for its exceptional water quality and for the geologic feature that underlies it, the San Andreas Fault. The unit offers broad bay vistas, rare sandy beaches, and forested uplands. The unit contains coastal prairie and nearly untouched Bishop pine forest, which contains nesting ospreys and spotted owls. The unit contains the archaeological remains of Native American village sites.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, interpret and manage the unit's cultural, natural and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Tomales Bay State Park is established to make available for public use and enjoyment a significant portion of the Tomales Bay shoreline along its west side, extending from the developed limits of Inverness on the south to the point of land beyond Indian Beach on the north, and extending inland to the Pierce Point Road serving this portion of the Point Reyes Peninsula. The jewel-like beaches within the park are of particular value, together with their watersheds and marshlands behind them. The Bishop pine forest within the park, designated as a memorial to Willis Lynn Jepson, is of great importance and must be managed for the perpetuation of its ecological values. Recreational activities are appropriate to encourage and enhance public enjoyment of the natural and scenic features of the park provided they do not impair or damage those values.

The prime resource of this unit is the substantial body of wildland and its open space situated within a metropolitan area. The wildlands occupy most of this unit except for several hundred acres at the Yoba area and within Rustic Canyon.

The primary purpose of this unit is to protect and preserve the wildland area and its open space character along with its scenic, geologic, edaphic, and biotic features, and to make available to the public the environmental amenities and the recreational and educational opportunities which the unit resources provide. A secondary, but nonetheless important, purpose is to protect and preserve the important cultural resources within the unit and in conjunction with those at the nearby Will Rogers State Historic Park, to make such resources available to the people for their enjoyment and enlightenment.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Topanga State Park is established to make available for public use and enjoyment in an essentially natural condition a significant portion of the Santa Monica Mountains near the southern limits of the range centering on the headwaters of Topanga Canyon and including but not limited to portions of Topanga Canyon, Santa Ynez Canyon, Los Liones Canyon, Rustic Canyon, and Sullivan Canyon. The purpose of Torrey Pines State Reserve is to protect and perpetuate the area's prime resource values for the enlightenment, inspiration, and enjoyment of present and future generations. Prime resource values in the reserve in descending order of significance are: 1) the Torrey pine and its native plant community, 2) Los Penasquitos wetlands, 3) state and federally listed rare, endangered, and threatened plants and animals, 4) evidence of Native American and possibly Early Man occupation, 5) plants and animals designated by the department as species of special interest, and 6) exposed geologic sequences. Secondary values include recreational opportunities which directly relate to, and do not detract from, the primary resource values.

The long-range objectives of the department shall be to manage the prime resource values in the unit in such a manner that the ecological processes function as closely as feasible to what they would have without modern mankind's disturbance. Management exceptions to this shall be made only upon a special determination by the department, such as site protection of Native American artifacts which would normally be lost through natural erosion processes.

Appropriate visitor use of the unit includes only those activities that allow for the encourage enjoyment of the prime resource values and do not detract from or degrade from these features, so that future generations shall have the same experiences and opportunities.

03/1964 - Master Plan Review Committee

The purpose of Torrey Pines State Reserve is to make available to the people forever, for their enlightenment, inspiration, and enjoyment, the only natural stand of the rare Torrey Pine on the California mainland, together with all related scenic, scientific, historical and appropriate recreational resources inherent to the area.

The function of the Division of Beaches and Parks at Torrey Pines State Reserve is to prescribe and execute a program of management and interpretation consistent with the character and fragility of the natural value and directed toward their perpetuation, in accordance with the declared purpose of the unit.

The purpose of Trinidad State Beach, in Humboldt County, is to preserve and protect an unusually scenic portion of Pacific Ocean coastline, including Pewetole Island. The unit features dramatic bluffs, smooth sandy beaches and an upland Sitka spruce forest. The unit contains cultural sites of the Yurok Indians.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Trinidad State Beach is to make available for public use and enjoyment in an essentially natural condition the Pacific Ocean beach with related uplands from Trinidad Head upcoast to the vicinity of Hurricane Point. Public outdoor recreational facilities may be installed to enhance the public enjoyment of the ocean beach. Facilities may not impair the extent or quality of the sandy ocean beach within the unit which is the prime resource. The highly scenic uplands, including but not limited to Trinidad Head, the headlands behind Trinidad Beach, the off-shore islands, and the headlands around College Cove, will be jealously guarded to preserve their scenic and natural integrity. All public outdoor recreational activities which bear a relationship to the public enjoyment of the ocean beach may be provided within this unit.

Van Damme SP #142

06/1995 - General Plan

The purpose of Van Damme State Park is to make available to the people for their inspiration, enlightenment, and enjoyment, in an essentially natural condition, the outstanding scenic features and natural values, including the coastline and offshore environs; the dramatic seacliffs, and stretches of sandy beach; the headlands and marine terraces; the riparian habitats associated with Little River and Beal Creek; the variety of forest communities including the grand fir/sitka spruce forest, Bishop pine forest, redwood forest, and Mendocino pygmy cypress forest; the geology and plant and animal life; the significant historical and archaeological resources; and the scientific values therein.

The department shall define and execute a program of management to perpetuate the unit's declared values and provide recreational facilities, interpretation and access, that make these values available in a manner consistent with their perpetuation.

06/1995 - Spirit of Place Statement

For many visitors to the Mendocino Coast, this place is known for the little giants - the pygmy cypress. Located on the upper terraces, the pygmy forest tells a story of geologic change - trees dwarfed by very old, impoverished soils. Away from the intense beach activity, visitors walk the Little River road now covered by a dense canopy of alders, Douglas firs, hemlocks, redwoods, and softened by fern canyon walls. Beyond the roadway, the trail climbs out of the canyon into a different landscape where the view is not through the forest but over the top of the aged dwarfed trees.

For some who venture through the Little River Canyon, in search of the "little giants", the excitement and adventure is diminished (sic) upon their arrival to (sic) the pygmy forest. At the end of the 3.5 mile trail is the park's "back door", with the service road access and view of the parking lot reducing the sense of discovery. Approaching the boardwalk, one may try to forget the man-made intrusions surrounding the site and look for the pygmy cypress; with some skepticism for the truth of their age, they begin to feel their strength and understand their sensitivity. The excitement of nature returns.

In this seemingly wilderness area, rich with abundant plant and animal life, a season occurs when the interest of nature gives way to the migration of abalone divers and underwater enthusiast. The park is then transformed from nature's campground into a hunting village, when after a successful hunt, divers pound the abalone generating rhythmic sounds that echo throughout the campground. One wonders if this modern day use doesn't in some way mimic its pre-historic use by Native Americans. This signals that time of year when Van Damme is occupied predominantly by recreation divers - wet suits, air tanks, and rubber boats dominating the scene. The diver's presence in the offshore underwater habitat and the park, overwhelms unsuspecting campers, and beach users who are unfamiliar with this seasonal sport. While the focus is offshore in the marine environment, the inland areas provide refuge for non-divers and a place of rest and gathering for groups and individuals sharing this common interest. As the crescento subsides and the hunters migrate elsewhere, the village returns to normal, the park awakens and the spirit of nature emerges once again, until the next hunting season.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

Van Damme State Park is a unit of the State park System so that a beautiful portion of California Pacific Coast shoreline in the vicinity of the mouth of Little River in Mendocino County, together with the riparian zone of Little River, extending inland for 5 miles, and the related uplands including examples of Pygmy forest, redwood forest and other forest and brushland communities associated with the coastal zone may be available to the public for use and enjoyment forever. All archeological resources which may occur within the park will be carefully protected and interpreted. Overnight and day use recreational activities may be provided for the public to the extent that they do not interfere with the scenic values or with the normal ecological processes of the region, and for the purpose of enhancing visitor understanding and enjoyment of the prime values.

The purpose of Wilder Ranch State park is to protect, preserve, and make available to visitors the cultural and natural resources including historic features, natural biotic communities, geologic and edaphic resources, and related recreational values of the portion of the coastline and coastal mountain region of central California. Public use and enjoyment of the park is to be encouraged in the limits established by the state park classification and resource sensitivities.

Cultivated agricultural lands in the unit represent an important aspect of the area's history and are recognized as significant to the community and the state in terms of their present productivity. However, retention of this land in cultivated agriculture is considered of secondary importance to that of providing appropriate recreational opportunities and of protecting any outstanding cultural or natural resources.

The purpose of the proposed Cultural Preserve at Wilder Ranch State Park is to preserve the cultural resources of the Wilder Ranch complex area. The Native American resources in the preserve are the most intact occupation site areas in the park. The historic resources are of statewide significance.

The purpose of the proposed Natural Preserve at the mouth of Wilder Creek is to protect the wetlands and coastal strand and one of only two nesting sites in Santa Cruz County still used by the snowy plover.

Through interpretive tours, and special events, the department shall promote an understanding of Will Rogers' contributions to American history, folklife, and the national character.

03/1992 - Spirit of Place Statement

This description is intended to portray the spirit of Will Rogers SHP. It identifies intrinsic values that pertain to the essential and inherent nature of the place - aspects that are not necessarily set only by law, science, or economics. It identifies the site's uniqueness, that which sets it apart from all other places. Spirit of place identifies the distinctive characteristics that the site possesses; that is, the set of attributes that determine this uniqueness of its landscape, architecture, and history.

What it is (Existing Condition)

Today, Will Rogers' ranch lies in the midst of the community of Pacific Palisades, next to Beverly Hills, an established residential neighborhood with very high real estate values.

Open space and quietness at the park are significant aspects on weekdays. There is still today a feeling of being on a private ranch.

Weekends often bring crowded conditions, and the park takes on an athletic field feeling, with soccer games and crowded picnic areas. People today are trading quietness for access to open space, even though it is crowded.

What it Was (Historic Condition)

The kind of place that the ranch was when Will Rogers occupied this property has been greatly detailed by DPR park staff, historians, and landscape architects in the Cultural Resources Element of this plan.

To briefly describe what kind of place the ranch was, the following paragraphs illustrate Rogers' relationship to his Santa Monica ranch house, the equestrian facilities, and the landscape.

Will Rogers' personality was one of homespun simplicity - casual, informal, and unpretentious. His career as a witty speaker and humorous writer was a combination of his country-style background, his entertaining roping skills, and his political point-of-view speeches. His hobbies included horseback riding, roping, and relaxation and enjoyment. Will Rogers' tremendous popularity led to his desire for the privacy of a family ranch.

The Rogers' (sic) entertained their friends in a country fashion that Rogers enjoyed the most; casual dress, outdoor cooking, and chats with his friends. The house interior was casual, built with exposed wooden beams and rustic country furniture. As Rogers acquired gifts and mementos related to his statesmanship, he decorated the ranch house with Native American blankets, ropes, and saddles. The whole ranch image was one of tranquility - spacious green lawns with white rail fencing, and ponies trotting here and there.

Will Rogers created this place. This was the Rogers family's primary residence, and it was conceived and designed by Rogers for himself and his family. The wholeness of the place, including landscape, building sites, and architecture, represents conscious choices made by Rogers. What he liked and the way he liked to live is manifested in the place, and the spirit of the place survives to the extent the wholeness of the place is preserved.

What is different

The historic spirit of place is markedly changed upon entering the ranch. The long, curving driveway, ending with a spectacular view across grassy open space to the ranch house, is no longer used. Now, the entry is still off Sunset Boulevard, but it brings visitors past residences in from behind the ranch house into a parking area that is located on the old entrance driveway, and is on the grassy, open area. Visitors lose that grand promenade entrance experience one gets by using the old entry road.

Other changes are more subtle, but in increments of small details, the feeling of historic pastoral presence is diminished. Some of these small changes include:

- * The historic garage is now used as a visitor center.
- * the historic guest house is now used as park offices.
- * The polo field is used as an ordinary athletic field, and there is the resultant non-historic overcrowding, noise, etc.
- * Sarah's Point is no longer a green pasture.

- * Cars are parked where there used to be part of a small golf course and entrance road.
- * Huge, mature eucalyptus trees surround the area instead of the smaller, newly planted ones.
- * the once clear, distant views over Santa Monica and the ocean is (sic) now sometimes obscured by smog.
- * There is a lack of paint trim on the ranch house and the foundation plantings around it have changed.
- * There has been structural failure of some of the historic rock walls and ditches.
- * Much of the white-rail hose fencing has been removed over the years.

What It Should Be

The spirit of place should give the feeling of going back in time and of visiting Will Rogers' ranch as one of his guests. The presence of historic features, structures, and activities should predominate the scenery. The area needs to be as free as possible from modern-day cars, offices, and stored park equipment used for maintenance.

The spirit should be of a homey family ranch, peaceful, and at the same time active, especially with the equestrian activities that Will Rogers loved. One should almost believe that the Rogers family is still here, and that Rogers himself could be that person demonstrating roping, or could be one of those horsemen playing polo.

The spirit of place should leave one with the definite impression that this place is a memorial to Will Rogers.

William B. Ide Adobe SHP #128

01/1990 - General Plan

The purpose of William B. Ide Adobe State Historic Park is to interpret the role of William B. Ide as one of the leaders of the California Republic, as well as his role in the activities of the Bear Flag Revolt. It is also the purpose of this unit to interpret the role of William B. Ide as a pioneer of Colusa (sic) County, later to become Tehama County in 1856, and to interpret the life and times of the pioneers of Tehama county. The restored historic adobe situated at the western terminus of the ferry that crossed the Sacramento River shall be the core of these interpretive programs. (note: page 27 of the General Plan gives the text of an earlier Declaration of Purpose, whose date or source is not provided.)

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of William B. Ide State Historic Park is to commemorate W. B. Ide for his part as "General" in the Bear Flag Revolt and "President" for the brief California Republic, as an example of an Early California citizen who conscientiously devoted much of his life to public duty while California was a State through making available the Ide Adobe as an example of northern California adobe architecture.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at William B. Ide Adobe State Historic Park is to preserve, restore, furnish, and interpret the Ide Adobe in such a way as best to fulfill the declared purpose of the unit.

01/1975 - Interpretive Perspectus - Division Approved

The purpose of William B. Ide Adobe State Historic Park is to memorialize William B. Ide and his importance in early California history and to make available to the public the site of Ide's Crossing.

The function of the Department of Parks and Recreation at William B. Ide Adobe State Historic Park is to plan and execute a program which will interpret William B. Ide and the site of Ide's Crossing; and to furnish other such facilities and public services, consistent with the purpose of the Park as may be necessary for the full enjoyment of the Park by people.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose

To display and interpret for public enjoyment the home of Pioneer William B. Ide.

William Randolph Hearst Memorial SB #486

10/2000 - General Plan Policy Committee

The purpose of William Randolph Hearst Memorial State Beach, in San Luis Obispo County, is to preserve and protect an outstandingly scenic cove on the Pacific Ocean shoreline, situated in the southern portion of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary. With its high-quality marine environment, the unit provides opportunities for viewing a variety of marine mammals, including the southern sea otter, harbor seal, and migrating humpback and California gray whales. The safe harbor, the sandy beach, and the pier provide a range of appropriate outdoor recreation opportunities.

California State Parks will preserve, protect, restore, interpret and manage the unit's natural, cultural, aesthetic and scenic resources, features and values, making them available to the public for their educational, inspirational and recreational benefits.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of William Randolph Hearst Memorial State Beach is to make possible the public use and enjoyment of the Pacific Ocean shoreline in the vicinity of the community of San Simeon on the San Luis Obispo County coastline. All public outdoor recreational activities which are appropriate to the enjoyment of the ocean beach and which do not impair the scenic or natural integrity of the beach or of the related uplands may be developed and operated within the State Beach.

Willowbrook SRA #506

10/1978 - General Development Plan

The development of recreation facilities at Willowbrook Park will serve to preserve a valuable urban open space resource. This preservation will serve to meet the needs of a heavily urbanized area of the State. In development of these resources, a sensitive approach to design should incorporate the social, economic, and recreational needs of the city dweller. Since Willowbrook Park represents the last remaining valuable open space of any significant size in the south-central Los Angeles area, the retention of its open space resources should be emphasized in the overall development plan.

Woodland Opera House SHP #327

03/1980 - General Plan

The purpose of Woodland Opera House State Historic Park is to provide visitors with a facility in which they can learn about and enjoy activities associated with professional and amateur theatrical productions, symphonies, public staged events, ballets, operas, and related cultural activities, as well as public functions such as town meetings and political, civic, and professional conferences that are harmonic (sic) with similar historic events held in the building in the past.

The opera house should be a monument to theatrical history. A regular museum exhibit is to be provided, but more importantly, production of plays and other events in the restored theater will occur. In essence, the past will live again as part of the present.

08/1987 - General Plan

The purpose of Zmudowski State Beach is to protect, perpetuate, and make available to the people, for their benefit and enjoyment forever, the scenic, natural, cultural, and recreational resources of the ocean beach and the adjacent coastal dunes.

The function of the California Department of Parks and Recreation at Zmudowski State Beach shall be to preserve and protect the coastal dunes and the related native vegetation and to make opportunities for ocean beach-oriented recreation available to the public.

12/1975 - Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Zmudowski State Beach is to make possible the public use and enjoyment of the Pacific Ocean beach and shoreline between the mouth of the Salinas River and the mouth of Elkhorn Sough in Monterey County. All public outdoor recreational activities which are appropriate to the enjoyment of the ocean beach with its scenic and recreational resources may be developed and operated within this State Beach. Facilities may not impair the scenic and natural integrity of the ocean beach.

01/1974 - Interpretive Perspectus - Proposal Only

The purpose of Zmudowski State Beach, established in 1950, is to provide, for the people forever, for their recreation, inspiration and aesthetic enjoyment, a combination of beach, dune and river delta together with the indigenous flora and fauna in an essentially undeveloped state.

The function of the California Department of Parks and Recreation is to manage the resources as a composite whole, preserving the character of the area in accordance with sound ecological principals, to interpret the resources to the people and to develop necessary services and facilities compatible with the preservation of the scenic and natural resources while providing optimum consistent recreational opportunities.

07/1959 - Statement of Purpose
